Canada expels Soviet spies

OTTAWA (CP) — Three Soviet Embassy employees are being expelled for spying, the second major expulsion in two years, External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald said Monday.

The minister told reporters the embassy employees are being thrown out of the country for buying classified information from an American citizen. The information and the payments were exchanged in Ottawa.

The embassy officials must leave within the next week.

She said she told Soviet ambassador Alexander Yakovlev the expulsion is unrelated to the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

The embassy employees being expelled include: Capt. Igor Bardeev, military, naval and air attache; Col. Eduard Aleksanjan, assistant military attache; and V. I. Sokolov, chauffeur.

The government tossed out 13 Soviet diplomats in February, 1978 for spying. In the last 20 years, a total of 21 diplomats have been formally ordered to leave the country for suspected espionage.

MacDonald said the RCMP determined that "over a period of some 16 months these Soviet officials met clandestinely with the U.S. citizen, using traditional signal arrangements and dead letter boxes in the Ottawa area, where exchanges of information took place and payments were made."

The RCMP completed its investigation last week, working in co-operation with the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation. The FBI had been helped in its investigation by the American citizen.

She said she is concerned about the use of Canada by the Soviet Union "as a base from which to conduct espionage operations against one of our allies."

The Soviet Union paid more than $100,000 for the information.

It is up to the United States to decide what to do with the American citizen involved, she said.

The Soviet Union will be allowed to send in three more employees as replacements, keeping the embassy staff at 64, the minister said.

Miss MacDonald said she told the Soviet ambassador she would not like to see any Soviet retaliation against Canada for the expulsion. If there were, counter-measures would be taken against Moscow.

She indicated the spy issue might have "some spinoff effect on other matters' when asked about the Canadian response to the Soviet invasion in Afghanistan. The government still is considering further measures to protest the Soviet move, she said.

In the last expulsion, Soviet diplomats were ordered out of Canada for attempting to recruit an RCMP officer to spy for them.

Don Jamieson, then external affairs minister, said the Soviet agents' activities were directed only against the RCMP and not any other country.

Miss MacDonald would not reveal the name of the American citizen involved in the latest case nor the information he provided.

Greenpeace threatens to blockade tankers

An environmental spokesman has warned his group will organize a blockade if super-tankers carrying Alaska crude oil attempt to enter Juan de Fuca Strait under the Northern Tier pipeline proposal approved last week by U.S. President Jimmy Carter.

Greenpeace president Patrick Moore said Sunday a blockade is the only tactic that could stop the tankers which would bring oil from Valdez, Alaska, to Port Angeles, Wash.

Moore said Greenpeace would need help from other organizations, such as native groups and fishermen, in setting up the blockade.

The blockade threat was followed by a statement today from Environment Minister Stephen Rogers that there is virtually nothing B.C. can do to protect its coastline from a major oil spill.

"In terms of our preparations for handling oil spills on the West Coast, I doubt that Environment Canada or the provincial environment ministry has anything like enough capacity to handle it," he said.

"But I doubt anybody has enough capacity to handle the volume of oil we'd be looking at if we had a major disaster."

Meanwhile, Jack Nichol, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, said if oil is shipped along B.C.'c coast, it will prove "the politicians are completely out of whack on this one."

He said the oil should be shipped further south to California.

Gold jumps to $850

LONDON (AP) — Gold hit a record $850 U.S. a troy a ounce — $987 Canadian — at the afternoon fixing in London today, after soaring to $845 in Zurich. The Zurich price had matched the record set in European trading Friday.

London silver prices, meanwhile, rose to a record $50 U.S. an ounce — — $58.08 Canadian — from $49 at Friday's close.

European bullion dealers said early activity today was confined mainly to inquiries.

Export gas price hiked

The price paid B.C. and other provinces for exported natural gas will go up 30 per cent to $4.47 U.S. from $3.45 U.S. effective Feb. 1.

The increase, announced today by federal Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn, means an additional annual revenues of $985 million for Canada assuming natural gas exports are maintained at the 1978-79 level.

The annual value of natural gas exports will be about $4.3 billion.

In Victoria, Energy Minister Bob McClelland said he welcomes the increase as a source of revenue to the province.

However, the provincial government has under consideration a seven per cent increase for domestic users.

The hike in the export price came as Washington State Gov. Dixie Lee Ray arrived in Victoria to meet with Premier Bill Bennett to discuss a number of energy-related issues.

CTV poll has Grits still ahead as election day draws closer

TORONTO (CP) — A poll taken by the CTV television network a month before the federal election indicates the Liberals will form the next government.

Fifty-seven per cent of respondents to the poll said the Liberals would win Feb. 18, compared to 23 per cent who thought the Progressive Conservatives would remain in power. Two per cent expected the NDP to form the government.

Nationally, 51 per cent said they would likely vote Liberal — 20 percentage points more than those who thought they would vote for the Conservatives. The Liberal figure was nine points higher, and the Tory figure seven points lower, than the results to the same question in a CTV poll midway through the last federal campaign.

NDP was up two to 16 per cent and other parties were down four to two per cent.

He said the CTV poll confirmed the findings of two Gallup polls, a Carleton University poll and private party polls.

Reacting to the poll, Prime Minister Joe Clark was optimistic.

"I'm always more comfortable running as the underdog," Clark said on an open-line show on CHAN-TV. "That means my workers will get out and work."

Conservative strength will change once Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau comes out of hiding and faces the issues, Clark said.

Forty-eight per cent of those polled said they thought Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau was most capable of solving the country's problems, compared with 22 per cent who favored Clark.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent was supported by 16 per cent, others had one per cent and 13 per cent said none of the three was capable of resolving Canada's problems.

The poll of 1,000 persons across Canada was conducted by Thompson, Lightstone and Co. Ltd.

Regionally, the Prairies were the biggest surprise. The Liberals were supported by 41 per cent of those polled, a 17-point increase. The gain appeared to be at the expense of the Conservatives who dropped 14 points to 43. NDP remained at 16 per cent.

The largest gain by the Liberals — 26 points to 59 — was registered in the Atlantic provinces The gain appeared to come from former supporters of the NDP, which dropped 15 points to nine. The Tories were down four to 32.

In voter-heavy Ontario, Liberals were up slightly to 43, but the Conservatives dropped 11 points to 35. NDP was up eight to 21 per cent.

The region including British Columbia, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories was the only one in which the Liberals and the Conservatives appeared in a tight race.

BCR workers staying out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hopes for an early end to the lengthy strike by British Columbia Railway employees appeared to be dashed today as members of a key union voted in first returns not to go back to work.

Ken Lindley, chief spokesman for the 450 conductors and brakemen employed by the government-owned railway, said returns from voting Sunday night were negative.

There were reports that the union's members in Prince George and North Vancouver, representing about half of the UTU membership, had rejected an end to the month-long work stoppage.

The union is the one which would be affected by a company proposal to eliminate one brakeman from most trains.

Lindley said two other unions in the seven-union Joint Council of Railway Unions, which represents B.C. Rail's 2,200 striking employees, were supporting the UTU's objections to a tentative settlement worked out last week with the help of provincial Labor Minister Jack Heinrich.

Heinrich said from Prince George today that he had expected the railway's operations to begin before the seven unions conducted ratification votes on the proposed settlement. The ratification process was expected to take about a month.

Lindley said he was waiting today for final ballots to come in from northern members of his union.

The back-to-work agreement is being presented without a recommendation by the negotiating committee of the Joint Council of Railway Unions.

Cooper holds answers in his hand

By PAUL MINVIELLE

After almost two decades of working diligently and without fanfare planning for disasters, the uneasy international situation has thrust Fred Cooper back into the public eye.

While the global crisis caused by the Russian invasion of Afghanistan hasn't quite reached the manic proportions of the original Cold War, Cooper, Emergency Planning Canada regional director for B.C., says it's getting there.

His Victoria office has been handling up to a dozen calls a day asking for information on building bomb shelters, and his colleagues across the country are witnessing the same phenomenon.

What prompted the suddenly flurry of interest in fallout and shelters was the Russian invasion of Afghanistan Dec. 27.

"I can't recall when there's been so much interest," says Cooper.

In Toronto, anxious residents have been calling architects and construction companies in the last few weeks for advice on how to build them. Some have even gone ahead and built their own.

In Winnipeg, the Emergency Measures Organization has been mailing out pamphlets dealing with nuclear attack "like they were going out of style."

And in Edmonton, the Emergency Planning Canada office has mailed out more than 2,000 packages of information on nuclear fallout shelters and planning for a nuclear war.

Cooper said in a recent interview he is confident emergency plans will work as long as a nuclear attack doesn't come suddenly.

"Provided it didn't happen in the middle of the night and we have time to get ready, we'll be all right." he said.

While that sounds hilarious at first glance, Cooper hastens to qualify it. The reporter in question just didn't bother to follow through.

The pure and simple fact, says Cooper, is if there is what military planners call a "preemptive strike" — that is, an attack completely without warning — we've had it.

"It doesn't really matter what we do — we're going to get it anyway," he said.

But military planners, Cooper says, insist that there will probably be plenty of warning of a nuclear war and so far nobody appears to believe the Afghanistan crisis has reached the stage where it could trigger a nuclear war.

Cooper also took issue with suggestions that Emergency Planning Canada planners have been sitting in dusty offices awaiting the next threat of nuclear war before inunindating the public with two-decade-old pamphlets on how to build fallout shelters.

That betrays an ignorance of what EPC and its provincial counterpart have been doing, Cooper says.

In peacetime, the two emergency groups have concentrated on emergency plans in the event of such disasters as floods or earthquakes, not war.

As for a dusty, decades-old pamphlet with a foreword by the late John George Diefenbaker, Cooper points out that back in the late Fifties, someone grossly overestimated the number of pamphlets that would be required.

Rather than have them destroyed, EPC kept them and they're now being mailed out again.

"It seemed a waste to reprint them insofar as the information is basically still up-to-date," Cooper said.

As an example of EPC's peacetime role, Cooper points out that he's been involved in assessing recent flood damage in the Lower Mainland.

Federal and provincial aid to disaster victims is based on these assessments.

The EPC office also makes available information on how to cope with disasters like earthquakes and the like.

It recommends that everyone have a two-week emergency supply of food, enough potable drinking water for the same length of time and a portable radio with plenty of batteries.

Without power, you can't cook and you can't run a regular radio or television set to find out what's happening.

If a nuclear attack does come, and if there is at least some warning, EPC does have plans in place

If necessary, municipal, provincial and federal government officials, as well as some designated industrial experts, will travel to Nanaimo to a large underground bomb shelter in the defence department property bordering Malaspina College.

It was built in Diefenbaker's regime and it's still called the Diefenbunker.

Tito OK after surgery

Yugoslavia's 87-year-old leader was operated on Sunday for the second time in eight days to prevent fatal gangrene poisoning due to blockage in the arteries of the leg.

"The general condition of President Tito is good," his doctors said in a medical bulletin issued today. They said his pulse, blood pressure and temperature were within normal limits.

Belgrade remained calm despite speculation all week that the Russians might try to coerce Yugoslavia back into the Kremlin's orbit if Tito, the pioneer of the independent communism, died. Anti-aircraft guns were set up at the Belgrade and Zagreb airports, but this appeared to be part of a nationwide low-priority "vigilance" program ordered after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

In Bonn, the West German defence ministry denied German newspaper reports that the Soviets were reinforcing their forces in Central Europe because of Tito's condition.

"A strengthening of Warsaw pact troops in Central Europe or unusual troop movements cannot currently be observed — also not against Yugoslavia," a spokesman said.

"We are with Tito as always," the newspaper Borba said today. "Tito is with us and in us."

The amputation had been expected since the doctors announced last Monday that surgery performed the day before failed to restore circulation to the lower leg.

Games boycott favored

Times News Services

Polls show a majority of Americans favor a U.S. boycott of the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

The polls were released Sunday, the same day President Carter called on the International Olympic Committee to boycott the Moscow Games or transfer them to another site if the Soviet forces are still in Afghanistan a month from now.

Newsweek said 56 per cent of the 518 people in the survey conducted for the magazine by the Gallup Organization last Wednesday and Thursday feel the U.S. should boycott the Games if they are played in Moscow.

The Washington Star said 86 percent of the 2,666 readers who responded to a questionnaire said they favored a U.S. boycott of the summer Olympics in Moscow.

Carter has no legal authority to dictate a boycott and the U.S. committee will meet next weekend in Colorado Springs, Colo., to consider the president's request.

The committee will meet in Lake Placid in mid-February, just before the Winter Olympics begin.

IOC president Lord Killanin rejected Sunday U.S. moves to boycott the Moscow Olympic Games in retaliation for Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

In Vancouver Sunday, Prime Minister Clark said he has not ruled out the possibility of Canada boycotting the Olympic Games in Moscow if Soviet troops do not leave Afghanistan.

He told reporters External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald will meet Canadian Olympic officials as soon as possible to formally ask them to advocate a change of location when they attend International Olympic Committee (IOC) meetings before the next month's Winter Games in Lake Placid.

In Toronto Saturday, Steve Paproski, federal minister of fitness and amateur sports, announced Canada is ending an amateur sports exchange agreement with the Soviet Union because of its invasion of Afghanistan.

Paproski said swimming, diving, judo and gymnastic events will be cancelled and other sporting events will be reviewed as they come up.

Under the agreement, about 60 Canadian athletes were to have competed in the Soviet Union this year.

Four Canadian wrestlers were scheduled to compete in Tbilisi, six gymnasts were entered in meets in Moscow, five divers were to have travelled to Minsk and 30 players and coaches were to have represented Canada at the annual Izvestia hockey tournament in Moscow.

In turn, Soviet skaters, hockey teams, swimmers and judo teams were scheduled to compete in Canada.

President Carter has received little international support and some very stiff criticism for his boycott .

Some governments expressed sympathy with the reasoning behind Carter's call, but for the most part they deferred a final decision to their national Olympic committees.

In New York, NBC said today it is going ahead with its multi-million-dollar plans for covering the 1980 summer Olympics despite the call for a U.S. boycott.

Invasion uniting Arabs

Times News Services

Arab envoys in the Middle East were reported on the move today, engaged in intensive diplomatic activity that informed sources in Beirut, Lebanon, said is aimed at forging a common front on the issue of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

The Mideastern Arab states and other countries of the Islamic conference are scheduled to meet in Islamabad, Pakistan, next Saturday to discuss the situation in Afghanistan, where Soviet and Afghan government forces are trying to put down a rebellion by fundamentalist Moslem tribesmen.

Several Islamic states, including Saudi Arabia, have already announced they will boycott the Gummer Olympic Games in Moscow in protest.

Meanwhile, Afghanistan's seven rebellious Moslem factions are reported trying to unite for a holy war against the Soviet occupation army.

"The Afghan revolutionaries' duty is to expel the Soviet forces from Afghanistan through jihad (holy war), not through negotiations," the official said.

Pentagon sources in Washington said the fighting since the Soviet intervention has been fiercest in the northeastern part of Afghanistan, bordering the Soviet Union, Pakistan and China.

Meanwhile, the Soviet-backed government decided this weekend to halt for the moment the issuance of official documents allowing Western journalists to work in the Central Asian country.

The move, which followed the expulsion of all American correspondents from Afghanistan last week, was seen as a possible prelude to orders to all non-Communist reporters to leave the country.

In Tehran, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, describing the presence of Soviet troops 28 kilometres from the Iran-Afghanistan border as a "serious threat," has promised his country will take decisive action on the matter.

Smokers start young

OTTAWA (UPC) — About half of Canada's schoolchildren try cigarettes before they leave primary school and more than a quarter of high school students are regular smokers, according to a health department survey released Monday.

The survey, released to coincide with the start of national non-smoking week, polled students in grades three to 13 in 409 schools. A total of 105,788 students responded to the questionnaire.

By age 12, one half of elementary school children had tried smoking. By age 14 about 15 percent of boys and 20 percent of girls were daily smokers. By age 17, those figures increased to 27 percent of boys and 30 percent of girls.

"The figures showed some indications that boys who smoke tended to smoke more heavily than girls. In grades three and over, 47 per cent reported having never smoked at all."

The survey showed also students were less likely to become regular smokers than those from families where one or both of their parents smoked.

COQUITLAM (CP) — About 200 students of Montgomery Junior Secondary School walked out of classes Friday to protest against recent suspensions of two students who were arrested by police for drug possession.

The students, who also were upset with what they termed were searches of their lockers by teachers, gathered on a school field.

Student leader Leard Robertson said the situation has been building for some time.

"The atmosphere in this school is one of a prison," he said. "The only way we can voice our opinions is to walk out like this, like unions go on strike."

School principal Terry Nelford denied students' charges that lockers were searched for drugs. Students had to clean out their lockers under supervision of teachers, a normal practice at the end of each school semester, he said.

Nelford said that since Christmas, six or seven students have been suspended for possession or use of marijuana or hashish. He said, however, that the drug problem at Montgomery is no worse than at other schools.

No loophole — Curtis

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis denies there is a loophole in the province's $200 million mortgage scheme which could lead to U.S. lumber and plywood products being dumped in B.C.

Curtis also denied claims by NDP leader Dave Barrett that the mortgage program regulations were changed to require that only 50 per cent of materials used in the new homes must originate and be manufactured in B.C., rather than 100 per cent.

Barrett said this would defeat the program's purpose to stimulate housing starts and a demand for B.C. forest products and would lead to the dumping of U.S. products.

"I can't understand what would have led Mr. Barrett to misunderstand this important fact," Curtis said.

"It may be, being as fair as possible, that he came across some early drafts of material sent out by the B.C. Central Credit Union to various credit unions around the province."

The B.C. Central Credit Union was given responsibility for distributing the mortgage money which has an interest rate of 9 3-4 per cent in the first year.

"The fact of the matter is that from the inception of the program, from the very first moment that we started putting it together until still now, it's quite clear that B.C. forest products must be used," Curtis said.

Jack Munro, president of the International Woodworkers of America, said he was concerned about the implications of the possible loophole, but said he needed more time to study the exact meaning of the regulation.

"But we don't want plywood being dumped in Canada from the U.S."

Manly urges sanctions

Canada should consider trade sanctions to halt development of Port Angeles as an oil port, federal NDP candidates said Friday.

Jim Manly, candidate for Cowichan-Malahat, said President Carter's decision to support an all-American pipeline would result in heavy tanker traffic down the B.C. coast and into the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

The tankers pose a threat to the environment, including the fishing fleets, he said.

Manly said Canada should consider trade sanctions as a means of getting the U.S. to change its mind.

Robert Cameron, candidate for Esquimalt-Saanich, said Canada could exert signficant economic pressure on the U.S. by cutting back on sales of natural gas.

And Victoria candidate Robin Blencoe said he is impressed by the economic squeeze Americans had applied on Iran in the hostage situation and some of the same tactics should be adopted by Canada against the U.S. to get action on the oil port question.

Blencoe also raised the subject of the takeover of the Daily Colonist and the Victoria Times by the Thomson chain.

He said it is another example of corporate concentrations and one that threatens the communications industry by restricting its range of diverse opinion.

He proposed legislation governing both foreign investment and corporate concentration.

Second grain link judged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ed Strang, chief executive officer of the Port of Vancouver, said Sunday a proposal by Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau to build another rail line to Vancouver from Winnipeg would not present any appreciable grain-handling problems here.

Trudeau said in Estevan, Sask., last week that a Liberal government would direct Canadian National Railways to double track its mainline as part of a two-pronged effort to improve movement of grain and other commodities from the Prairies.

Strang said there now is a limit to the amount of traffic Vancouver can handle, but there is time to make the necessary adjustments needed to increase volume.

He suggested all grain be cleaned and dried before it arrived at Vancouver so it could be shipped faster. He also said there should be fewer grades of wheat shipped west, because more grades meant more handling.

Meanwhile, former chief justice Emmett Hall said the Liberal proposal was an election gadget.

Hall, author of Canada's most comprehensive study of grain handling, said during the weekend it is more important to upgrade the rail line between Edmonton and Prince Rupert to handle increased traffic generated when the new grain terminal at the northwest B.C. port is ready in 1983.

Derailed

The most that can be said about Liberal leader Trudeau's proposal to increase grain exports is that he has acknowleged bottlenecks in the domestic railway system as the biggest drawback. His solution is to double track the Canadian National Railway's mainline between Winnipeg and Vancouver.

Trudeau said his plan would double the amount of rolling stock chugging west. Fifty instead of 25 trains a day could end up on the Vancouver waterfront with grain for the export market.

In his zeal to overcome the Liberal void in the west, Trudeau has presented a costly, oversimplified solution to a problem rooted in legislation that dates back to the century.

Trudeau estimated the cost of construction at $800 million over eight years. Under his scheme the CNR, not the Canadian taxpayer, would pick up the tab through normal financing channels.

Trudeau in effect committed the Crown corporation to what critics say may be a billion dollar project by the time inflation ruffled the figures. But the fact is, doubling the amount of track at this time has never been perceived by transportation and grain analyists as necessary to improving the movement of grain west.

The erratic flow of grain has been attributed to three major problems: the lack of incentives for the railways, a shortage of rolling stock and over-loaded grain terminals on the west coast. Trudeau's plan ignores all three.

Of the three, the lack of financial incentives to haul grain quickly may be the most serious. The shortage of grain cars has induced the Saskatechwan government to commit its treasury to the construction of 1000 new cars. And the Alberta government is backing the construction of a new grain terminal in Prince Rupert. Although both initiatives will help, they will be hampered by a freight charge system that works against the railway.

An 82-year-old pact, known as the Crowsnest Pass Agreement, froze producers grain carriage charges at the 1897 level. It is a subsidy to prairie farmers that was designed to compensate them for the tariff protection that the Canadian government has historically given eastern manufacturers. Today the cost of rail freight is split between the producers, the railways and the federal government in roughly a 30 — 20 — 50 percentage basis.

The shortcoming is that it provides no incentive to the railway to upgrade their services. The president of Pioneer Grain Ltd. calls the Crow rate "the gut problem of the prairie wheat economy today."

Because of the Crow rate, governments are buying and servicing hopper cars. The railways in turn move the grain at any speed they chose.

It has always been considered political suicide in the west for any government to attempt eliminating the Crow rate. But it could be politically expeditious, even for the Liberals, to renegotiate the rate so railways have good reason to move grain to the coast on the track that now exists. It could be much cheaper than $800 million.

Deregulation needed

Although it claims to be a supporter of small business, individual initiative and deregulation, the Social Credit government seems to be undermining all three.

Latest victim of the provincial bureaucracy is Convair Coach Lines, whose licence to operate a bus service between downtown Victoria and the Vancouver airport was arbitrarily cancelled by the cabinet-appointed Motor Carrier Commission.

Remarkable. If the commission had a wider mandate, would it also ban all restaurants, movie theatres and toyshops? After all, no one could say they were essential services in our society.

If there is no need for the service, passengers will not use it, and it will go out of business. If, however, Victorians and tourists find the service convenient, why should the government step in to say it cannot be provided?

The commission may also have been influenced by complaints from Pacific Coach Lines that Convair would provide unfair competition. But really, how could a tiny company with four employees and two buses provide any significant competition to the huge Pacific Coach Lines.

If someone in the finance ministry is still concerned with deregulation, the Motor Carrier Commission might be a very good place to start.

JANE O'HARA

A new party of the centre?

LONDON — In the backrooms of Britain's political establishment, the action is hot and the moves are as deft an Arab switching shells on a street corner in Piccadilly.

There is a good reason for it. Not only is the opposition Labor party embroiled in a bitter public struggle over "Trotskyist infiltrators" and left-wing extremists controlling the party.

As well, the political pieces are stealthily being squared to form a new, centre-of-the road party — designed as a third option for British voters who are fast growing tired of Tory Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's right wing monetarism and have long since wearied of Labor's trade union socialism.

Canadian Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau had another name for it. Placing it on the political spectrum, he dubbed it "the radical centre" and he may yet prove a prophet, if indeed, this is an age where the middle is spreading.

Some backing

Admittedly the British scheme is still on the drafting board, but it reportedly has the backing of more than a dozen Labor MPs — most notably the silent support of Roy Jenkins, a former chancellor of the exchequer under Harold Wilson, and a man being touted as a possible leadership candidate when his term as EEC president expires this year.

Up front, the battle for a centre party is being visibly waged by David Steel, the resourceful leader of Britain's effete Liberals who managed to win only 11 seats in the last election. In truth, apart from Steel's predecessor Jeremy Thorpe who gained ample publicity for his extra-political activities, the Liberals' history has been unremarkable since Lloyd George and the Roaring '20s.

MARGARET THATCHER
. . . facing a new threat?

Roughly translated, it means he would like to skim off Labor's right wingers and "moderates" who are disaffected with the left-wing extremists controlling the party, and combine them with his own sorry rump of Liberal. Naturally any Tories to the left of Thatcher would also be welcome defectors. And there are likely to be some.

In a Gallup Poll released last week, Thatcher's popularity had plummetted to an all-time low, showing that taxpayers are tired of tightening their belts in order to hold up the government's pants.

The result, which reported that 54 per cent were dissatisfied with Thatcher as PM, will not be lost on her colleagues, nor on the private advertising firm of Saatchi and Saatchi, who prepackaged her in the May election and are closely monitoring the pools.

In speaking of the new social democratic grouping he would like to create, Steel claimed: "The idea of such a grouping is not new. Twenty years ago Social Democrats and a much smaller band of Liberals were alrady debating the need for realignment.

"With an ailing Labor party, in a current bitter internal dispute, and a band of conservatism which has no broad appeal, the central issues for radicals and progressives must be: What is the alternative?"

No details

The alternative, according to Steel, would be a party "advocating electoral reform and constitutional change."

But if you want more details, Steel can not be pinned down. Nor can any of the Steel's mystery supporters in the Labor Party. They may be cautiously testing the water but they will neither cross the floor, nor their constituents until plans are firmed up.

In a recent opinion poll, 54 per cent of those surveyed said they would welcome a viable third option. The poll also showed, however, that there would not be sufficient support for it to win an eleetion.

According to the poll, Steel was the people's choice as prime minister of the Centre party. He was followed by former Tory prime minister Ted Heath, former Labor MP Shirley Williams and Jenkins, who is said to already have had talks with with Steel and potential financial backers.

Victoria Landmarks

Today's automatic washers had some interesting predecessors.

In 1902, the folding tubstand for 2 wooden tubs was general, and washday was woman power with a corrugated wash board in the tub of sudsy water, a hand wringer clamped to the tub, and the clothes passed into the rising tub. There was also an oblong, wooden, hand-operated washer that thumped the clothes up and down.

By 1907, a hand-operated rotary washer with a round tub was advertised.

A water-powered washer was on the market by 1920. It had a wooden dolly, corrugated sides in the tub. Attached to a tap, it had inlet and outlet hoses, needed 3½ gallons per minute to operate it. Also in 1920, there was a washer run by gasoline.

In 1922 came electric washers and wringers. Although they had casters, were quiet, and needed no cranking, they look clumsy now. As electric wringers could be dangerous, safety releases were added later. By 1928 the beater was of heavy aluminum, had a circulating motion and was removable.

The progress from the wifekiller washboard to the sophisticated settings of the modern automatics is a very human story and part of our social history. Contributed by Victoria Section, B.C. Historical Association.

Alarming remark

Rafe Mair, our minister of health, recently announced that he will attempt to cut back the number of abortions performed in B.C. This is an alarming statement from the person elected to look after our provincial health services, especially when we consider what has happened in other places where access to abortion has been restricted.

Women continue to have abortions, whether the law allows them or not. It is believed that in countries where abortion is illegal (such as most of Latin America) abortions are almost as frequent as in countries where it is legal. The notable difference between those countries is in the maternal death rate. In the ten years after the Romanian government passed a more restrictive abortion law in 1966, abortion-related maternal deaths rose sevenfold, and illegal abortions reached the level of legal abortions. If Mair is successful in restricting abortion services in B.C., our hospitals can expect to see, in their emergency wards, women who have had illegal abortions.

Rafe Mair may be interested in what happened last year in Manitoba, where the abortion rate is one third of B.C.'s. Only nine Manitoba hospitals have therapeutic abortion committees, of which only two approve significant numbers of abortions. Because of these inadequate facilities, 27 per cent of all abortions done in Manitoba are done in the second trimester; therefore Manitoba has a 10 to 11 per cent complication rate, as opposed to three per cent nationally; and 50 per cent of Manitoba women needing abortions have to go to the United States. We can expect the same thing to happen here if Rafe Mair makes it more difficult to get abortions in B.C. — Maxine Boag, CARAL, Victoria.

Not too late

Here on the remote island of Martha's Vineyard off Cape Cod, where I am living for the year, the unwelcome news has reached me that the British Columbia government is considering the retirement of the Princess Marguerite. As one who has visited Victoria twice in recent years aboard the Marguerite — and probably would not have gone had not the Marguerite been sailing — and who himself currently lives on an island highly dependent on resort trade, I thought my comments might be of interest.

We had our own version of the Princess Marguerite here in the islands off the Cape, but we lost her four years ago when the much-loved steamer Nobska was sold by our steamship authority to become a restaurant in Baltimore. That was before people were alert to the tourist appeal and historical importance of traditional boats. Now everyone — including the steamship authority which had foolishly decommissioned her — wants her back in her old Woods Hole — Martha's Vineyard-Nantucket service, but it is too late. When steamship authority personnel went to Baltimore this fall to examine the Nobska, they found her too greatly altered by restaurant use to return to service.

But it's not yet too late for British Columbia. Though I'm on the Atlantic coast, a whole continent away from the Princess Marguerite, I'm deeply concerned that the right decision be made. Should the government allow the Princess Marguerite to go out of service, the people of British Columbia will have lost irrevocably an institution of great value, not only historically but emotionally and commercially as well. — Karl R. Zimmerman, West Tisbury, Massachusetts.

Greater risk

The recent manouvering between America and China can be frightening for Russia and some other nations. It will have regional and global implications.

China after being a self-reliant and autonomous international actor for a couple of decades has opened its doors to the western world by buying planes from Britain, tanks from France and satellite equipment from the States, a big change of policy.

Once the late Mao thought it best to delink China from Moscow and confront Moscow and Washington simultaneously. Mao's strategy of an international united front to oppose both the super powers has turned out to be unrealistic. Meanwhile, Russia's presence in Afghanistan is worrying Pakistan and a new found alliance of Washington and Peking.

The risk of nuclear war increases with all these weapons. The destruction in two world wars was limited only by technology. Now nuclear weapons have removed that limit. Nuclear war may never come, but it would be the rashest folly and ignorance to think that it will not come because men, being reasonable beings, will realize the destruction it would cause. — Nikku Bedi, 134-1830 Fern Street.

Sports and politics

The Olympic committee has asked Western nations not to boycott the Moscow Olympics simply because the Soviet army has crushed yet another country, because, in the committee's words "sports and politics don't mix."

Why then, has the committee barred South Africa from the Games these many years, when that country is now ready to field a multi-racial team?

It seems to me that, instead of the runner carrying the traditional Olmpic flame into the stadium, he should unfurl the Olympic "Double standard" for all the world to wonder at.

If the Russians believe "sports and politics don't mix" they will not only insist that the South Africans be admitted, but they will rescind their satanic edict that all children are to be evacuated from Moscow during the festivities.

Meals get through

May I extend my most sincere thanks to all the very kind people who so promptly replied to my radio appeal for help in delivering Meals on Wheels during the recent heavy snowfall. Without their very generous assistance it would have been impossible to maintain our Meals on Wheels service. As in other emergencies, Victorians have again demonstrated that the Good Samaritan spirit is still alive in our city.

No message of thanks would be complete, however, without also expressing my sincere gratitude to all the regular volunteers who give so much of their time throughout the year and without whose faithful attendance every week Meals on Wheels would not be able to operate. — Joan Plumpton, Co-ordinator, Meals on Wheels, Silver Threads Service, 286 Hampton Road.

Index gains

One of the 50 promises made by Joe Clark before the last election read: "Index of capital gains for inflation." This was the one promise of his with which I most thoroughly agreed and my purpose in writing is to suggest that it should be sponsored by all parties in the coming election because there can be no question about the injustice now caused without such a provision.

Permit me to offer an actual example: About 1964 a friend of mine purchased 100 shares of Canadian stock at 24; they recently reached 32 and he would have liked to sell. If he had, income tax would have demanded capital gains on the eight points less brokerage, or approximately the $700 he was ahead. Ahead! Do you realize that due to the depreciation in value of our currency, he actually faced a loss of more than twice the theoretical profit?

Can you justify assessing tax on $700 when his actual loss was so much greater than that? I have no objection to the capital gains tax as such and realize that when it was laid on inflation was not then of great importance but it surely is now. Simple fairness demands that it be taken into account. Most of us don't mind being taxed on what we get but we certainly object to being taxed on what we lose. — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2474 Cadboro Bay Road.

Incongruous

It was with considerable surprise that I heard a radio message quoting Health Minister Rafe Mair as suggested in light of the abortion issue that there should be more sex education in the schools.

Planned Parenthood services have been funded by the federal government for three years. The object of the funding was to assess community needs. If the program were to be successful then provincial government funding was to be sought at the conclusion of the three-year limit.

The sex education services provided to the community groups have met with great interest and approval. Birth control information along with a discussion on sexual responsibility was given to any group requesting it. They included university students, student nurses, group home residents, developmentally handicapped students, teachers, counsellors and group home parents. There was also a great interest in discussion groups with parents on dealing with childrens' sexual questions.

RAFE MAIR

The provincial government early this year turned down a request for funding which would have allowed the continuance of such service in this community.

Pardon my confusion. On Jan. 11 the newspapers reported on a clampdown on abortion. On Jan. 15 Rafe Mair says let's attack the problem with more sex education programs. The incongruities of the statements in light of the refusal for funding make me wonder if he is really making a serious statement or is this a political ploy designed to cover the controversial stand on abortion? — Pearl M. Denny, Educator, Planned Parenthood Association of B.C., 1947 Cook St.

Unusual theatre

I feel I must respond to the column of Audrey Johnson (Dec. 22) entitled Globe proposal is out of this world. The column is largely based on misapprehensions which, I think, might have been cleared up had the reporter bothered to talk to anyone connected with the proposal.

To begin with, I should correct an error of fact. The main stage of the Oregon Shakespeare Festival in Ashland is not, as Ms. Johnson claims, a 'Globe type theatre'. The stage's dimensions are based on the Elizabeth Fortune theatre (by no means a typical London theatre), and its facade has many of the conjectured characteristics which were common to most of the theatres of the time, indoor or outdoor. Otherwise, the main theatre at Ashland bears utterly no resemblance to the Elizabeth public playhouse.

Our building proposed for the Maltwood property, on the other hand, will be the first attempt in the world at an operating reconstruction of an Elizabethan public theatre. Because it will be a living theatre, not a museum, it will inevitably have some anachronisms, but these will, we hope, be largely invisible to the observer.

Ms. Johnson devotes the bulk of her column to the financial problems of western Canada's, and particularly, Victoria's, art organizations, problems with which we are all too familiar. And we are aware that in our search for capital funds, we may well be in a very competitive field; with that in mind, we are vigorously investigating fund-raising methods that will be as innovative as our theatre.

At the same time, we must emphasize that most of these arts organizations are desperately searching for operating funds, not capital funds. And if the Globe is successful in attracting an audience even half the size of Ashland's, or a third of Stratford's, we will not have to worry about operating grants (and thus not have to compete for such grants). We will make a profit.

Our intention is to employ a company of Canadian actors; if we can compete with television for the name Canadians, maybe we will, but not at the cost of financial viability. Our audition sessions have given us ample proof that there is a great wealth of Canadian talent going to waste.

In conclusion, we have been most gratified at the enthusiastic response the Globe project has received from the public and from the Saanich council. The Times 'editorial of Dec. 17 called it an 'exciting' concept, and that has been a typical reaction. It seems strange that the theatre critics should not agree. — Conrad Boyce, President, The Lord Chamberlain's Players.

Editor's note: Mrs. Johnson replies:

Mr. Boyce speaks of "misapprehensions" that could have been resolved if I had "bothered" to talk to "anyone connected with the proposal." Naturally I attempted to contact Mr. Boyce but as he proved impossible to reach within the time at my disposal, I made a point of obtaining a complete copy of his presentation from Saanich Municipal Hall and reading it through from which perusal I drew my conclusions.

As to his implication that I am historically ignorant concerning Shakespeare's Globe Theatre, the book by Walter Hodges from which the sketch of the Globe Theatre included in his presentation is taken, has long been a well-read occupant of my bookshelves. My knowledge of Elizabethan theatre may not be as academic as Mr. Boyce's but it is quite sound.

As to the question of Ashland's theatre being more Fortune Theatre than Globe in the Elizabethan context, the matter is of an academic nature that places overmuch emphasis on the purely physical, albeit historical aspect, rather than the splendor of the plays, which, as Shakespeare himself said, are "the thing."

Distorted

The three-part series in the Times (Dec. 20-22) purporting to explain the events in Iran and other Muslim countries was an absolute farce.

Dr. Raphael Patai, the author of these articles, might be, as advertised by the Times, a brilliant anthropoligist, but as far as the study of religion goes, his knowledge is questionable.

ARTICLE 1 — December 20

1. The world can be divided into the House of Islam (submission to God) and the House of Ignorance (Dar ul kufr) — not the House of War as claimed by Mr. Patai. It cannot be claimed that the mistake was an innocent one. The word for war is Jihad and that for Ignorance, Kufr. The two words can hardly be confused with each other.

2. To conquer the world is not one of the basic commandments of Islam. Were it so, Muhammad would have accomplished that in his lifetime, since it as during that period that Islam was in every aspect, perfected.

By naming one sector of the world as Dar ul Kufr, Islam was drawing attention to the fact that there was still people who were rejecting the word of God, and that it should be preached to them. Incidentally, the Christians and Jews are not classified as "Dar ul Kufr" but are placed in a middle category, "People of the Scriptures" — with whom peaceful coexistence is possible.

3. Islam was not founded by Muhammad, but rather by the first man — Adam. All the prophets preached Islam (submission to God). Only after their deaths did their followers give the teachings such tribal identifications as Judaism and Christianity. God taught Man His edicts in a gradual revelation — culminating with the Qur'aan, and the last of the prophets, Muhammed.

4. Mr. Patai states that some acknowledge Jihad as a sixth pillar of Islam. He did not give the source of his claim — maybe because there is none. In neither the Qur'aan not the six works of Hadith can such a statement be found.

The fact is that there are many types of Jihad. Taking up arms to defend the cause of Islam is regarded as a great merit, but definitely not as a pillar.

The greatest Jihad (al Jihad ul Akbar) a Muslim can wage is the one against his baser urges — to commit sin. That is regarded as a war against the Devil and his acolytes.

5. Islam insists it is the only true monotheistic religion because it is. It has no doctrine of the Trinity, sonship, or mortal mother of God. In fact it regards all these tenets as heretical. Christ, while he had no father, was the product of a miracle. To assume that he had a father would give rise to the following illogic:

(a) God is a man.

(b) God needed mates to create life.

6. Islam does not permit non-Muslims to live in Mecca not because of a hatred of non-Muslims, but rather to maintain calm in its most precious sanctuary.

ARTICLE 2 — Dec. 21

1. The lethargy of the Muslim Arabs is due not to their belief in Islam, because Muhammad ordered them to go forth and seek knowledge. The Christian invaders tried as much as possible to prevent learning, especially in the early 19th century.

Their downfall was due to their lax attitude towards preserving the Testament God had finalized. It can be said with conviction, that when Baibars died, the last true defender died.

2. The snatching of land from under the Arabs' noses to create illegal states was fuel to the hatred they already felt for the West. The world claims that Islam was spread by the sword. History shows that the Papal authorities were the first to sail across the seas to attack the Muslims in their homeland.

After having been repelled, those fighting in the name of Christendom were not prepared to admit their defeat.

ARTICLE 3 — Dec. 22

1. Though not as damaging as the other articles, this one had the most ridiculous claim. It stated that in 1831, there were not universities in the Mid-East. I shall leave it to the reader to find out bout Al-Axhar, Omar Khayyam and Ibn Sina.

Mr. Patai deviated from his original aim to explain the events in Iran. He did not explain for example that it is against Islamic Law to hold as hostage ambassadors of any country.

The Iranian people have let anger at the U.S. cloud their judgement and are acting as irrationally as the U.S. itself. Their anger at a country that installed the murderous Shah, at a country that has probably killed more Muslims than Hitler killed Jews, is only partially satiated by their taking of the hostages.

Join Olympics

Proposals of boycotting the Olympic Games in Moscow by some western governments for some political reasons, whatsoever those are, are childish.

Can you imagine how all those athletes throughout the world who are preparing and looking forward for the 1980 games to show their skill will feel for their life-long aspirations. That's not social justice for those ambitious and talented athletes.

When last time some African countries boycotted the Games for some political reasons, we missed the competition and performance of some of the best athletes like Henry Rono. That was a disappointment for lots of sports-loving people around the world.

Meanwhile Saudi Arabia has already announced its inclination of not joining the games. I hope the other countries don't follow suit, at least for the athletes' sake.

Let's wish all the best to all the athletes of the world for their next competition. — Nikku Bedi, 134-1830 Fern Street.

Democratic way

Don Taylor, MP for Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands, has called the up-coming federal election "unnecessary" and "too expensive" because the majority in parliament had the audacity to defeat Clark's minority government.

Thankfully, Canada is still a democracy where governments and politicians are elected and defeated by the majority and where the citizens have the final say.

If Don Taylor thinks elections are unnecessary and the price of democracy too high and Canada should have another form of government where this isn't allowed to happen, then he'd better speak up now. — Heather McBeath, Chemainus.

Baluchistan's a likely target

By GEOFFREY GODSELL
Christian Science Monitor

If the Soviet Union intends to exploit its occupation of Afghanistan, the most inviting and vulnerable target is the Baluchi-inhabited area of Pakistan.

This is a much more likely immediate target than the oil fields of Iran. And it could bring Russian influence, if not actual presence, all the way down to the Arabian Sea.

The Soviet troops reportedly deployed in Afghanistan close to the Iranian border could be used to exert pressure on the Baluchistan province of Pakistan.

Any such Soviet action probably would be made in the name of Afghan nationalism or irredentism — of gathering into a greater Afghanistan both the Baluchi and Pushtun peoples who live astride the Afghan-Pakistani border. This would be an attractive cosmetic for a further expansion of Soviet influence.

Within a few days of being installed in power by the Soviets in Kabul, Babrak Karmal, the new president of Afghanistan, was quoted in a Tass dispatch carried by Pravda as saying:

"Since the peace-loving Afghan people reject the policy of expansionism, war and interference in internal affairs, the Democratic Republic of Afghanistan advocates the principle of the fraternal Pushtun and Baluchi people to express their will: These peoples must decide themseleves about their future destiny."

The message in these words was not exactly new. Rejection of the frontier with Pakistan, originally the frontier with British India, has been a constant thread of Afghan nationalism.

The present British-imposed frontier, unacceptable to Afghans of whatever political hue, splits the Pushtun people in two and the Baluchi people into three (among Afghanistan, Pakistan and Iran). In the recent past, Afghans have concentrated more on the Pushtun problem than on the Baluchi problem — with an active campaign in the late 1950s and early '60s for a separate Pushtun homeland or "Pushtunistan."

It has been less usual for Afghans to speak of the two problems in the same breath — as Karmal did at the end of December. His phrasing, therefore, might be a warning of an upgrading of the Baluchi problem.

Indeed, giving priority to the Baluchis over the Pushtun would make sense for several reasons:

1. The Baluchis already are more disaffected against central authority in Pakistan than are the Pushtuns.

2. Territorially, the Baluchi-inhabited area of Pakistan is nearly five times as big as the Pushtun-inhabited part (although much less densely populated).

3. Acquisition of the Baluchi-inhabited area of Pakistan would give Afghanistan an outlet to the sea at the port of Gwadar — and the Russians a point from which to threaten the Strait of Hormuz, the West's vital oil bottleneck.

Afghanistan's easiest outlet to the sea today is through another Pakistani port, the well-developed former capital, Karachi.

But Afghans long have felt a grievance that their landlocked country was at the mercy of Pakistan for access to the Indian Ocean.

The now-ousted shah of Iran was a principal agent in repairing that breach, with a face-saving formula for a much closer over-all relationship between his country and the other two. The deal was sweetened for Afghanistan with the expectation of easier Afghan access to the Iranian port of Chah Bahar, like Gwadar on the Indian Ocean side of the Strait of Hormuz.

But that expectation developed on the shah's plans for the massive development of Chah Bahar going through — and the revolution in Iran brought an end to that.

It would be hard to come up with a valid Afghan claim to Karachi, which is in Sind province and very much identified with Pakistan as such. Gwadar (although needing development as a port) is a different kettle of fish, especially given the potential for disaffection in Baluchistan.

Baluchi separatism in Pakistan already has a leftist or Marxist tinge. This is less because of intellectual or ideological reasoning than because eventual Soviet patronage seemed the likeliest course for the achievement of nationalist aspirations. Most Pakistani governments have tended to have a right-wing, anti-Soviet complexion and, until recently, were in alliance with the United States.

If the Baluchi pot is stirred inside Pakistan, it will be difficult to avoid its spilling over into Iran's Baluchi-inhabited provinces as well.

Already there have been intermittent Baluchi outbursts against Iran's Persian-dominated central authorities symbolized by Ayatollah Khomeini.

At the moment, Soviet interest would seem best served by letting the ayatollah's anti-Americanism run its course rather than by reviving centuries-old Persian hostility to the Russians by fomenting rebellion among the Baluchis.

But the Soviets seem to be in an ebullient mood, apparently convinced that the over-all balance in the area is shifting in their favor. Fears about reawakening Persian hostility may not deter the men in the Kremlin, especially if they feel the need to move before America manages to halt or reverse its own downward slide in the region.

Even blacker than ace of spades

Scientists and manufacturers have long sought a way to make the surface of objects pure black, because a pure black coating or paint would absorb all light, including the energy in it. Such a coating would make solar collectors much more efficient and would improve scientific devices used in radiation and heat measurements.

The National Bureau of Standards reports that one of its scientists, Christian E. Johnson, has discovered a way to enable the surface of an object to absorb 99.5 per cent of the light that strikes it. Objects with such surfaces are the blackest ever produced by man. If an object could absorb 100 per cent of all light striking it, the object would be invisible, except in silhouette against a lighted background.

Coatings and paints ordinarily derive their colors, including black, (which is the absence of color), through the use of fine particles known as pigments. But Johnson's discovery yields a blackness caused by the microscopic structure of the surface, not by pigments. The coating is prepared from nickel in which phosphorus has been dissolved. When treated with nitric acid, its silvery surface is partly etched in such a way as to leave a microscopic pattern looking like steep mountain peaks. They are much too small to be seen with the naked eye, and a surface covered with them looks and feels smooth.

When light strikes the surface it is trapped in the valleys between these peaks in a way that allows very little of it to escape. The effect is an uncanny blackness.

Johnson cautioned that it will be some time before his discovery can be put to practical use, because the tiny mountain peaks covering the nickel surface are very fragile. Rubbing the surface with an ordinary eraser quickly destroys the blackness, leaving the original metallic shine. For appications in which the black surface would be subject to wear, a coating must be found that would protect the fragile structure without making it reflective.

Trudeau woos B.C. with promise of sea power

VANCOUVER (UPC) — British Columbia maritime concerns will come under greater regional control under a re-elected Liberal government, Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau promised this weekend.

Trudeau spent Sunday hurtling down nearby Whistler Mountain in a day-long ski trip. On Saturday, however, he began his climb up the craggy precipice of the province's politics.

In an attempt to turn British Columbians into Liberals, Trudeau promised to meet demands for greater local control of the port of Vancouver and for resumption of financial support for faltering Trident Aircraft Ltd.

Trudeau also told party supporters at local campaign headquarters that a Liberal government would give greater regional autonomy to the fishing industry and continue the expansion of the port of Prince Rupert.

In his pitch to British Columbia voters, the Liberal leader — whose party was buried beneath a rock-slide in May when it lost seven of eight B.C. seats — said the federal government must be responsive to the needs of all regions of Canada.

"If there is anything I've worked for since I've been elected to Ottawa, it's to make sure that the federal government wasn't just that entity sitting and working in Ottawa," Trudeau said.

Before being turned out of power in last May's election, the Liberal government had planned to revamp the nation's harbor administration.

"Vancouver must be able to compete with Seattle, and this can best be done with greater local decision-making," he said.

Currently, some ports are run by local commissions but others — such as Vancouver — are run directly from Ottawa.

Trudeau said he would give all ports greater autonomy, but if the process of administrative changes across the country took too long, he would take separate action to create a local harbor commission for Vancouver.

Under the existing system of control, no expenditures of more than $50,000 for the harbor can be made without Ottawa's approval.

The Liberal leader said more effort would be made to include fishermen and the fishing industry in decisions affecting their livelihood, including the possibility of stationing an assistant deputy minister of fisheries on the West Coast.

Trudeau also promised to meet a 1978 commitment made by the former Liberal government to provide Trident — a Victoria-based manufacturer of seaplanes — with a $4-million grant and $2-million loan.

"Liberals will fulfill the commitments made while we were the government, and we will work with all interested parties to make Trident a success," he said.

After attaining power, the Conservative government ended financial support for the company $4 million short of the Liberal pledge, forcing the manufacturer to halt operations and lay off 107 workers.

On Monday, the Liberal leader planned to visit Whitehorse in the Yukon and Yellowknife in the Northwest Territories.

Taciturn Pierre afraid, women's leader says

By JULIET O'NEILL

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau's refusal to accept a campaign speaking invitation from a moderate faminist organization has left the group's leader wondering if he's afraid of the women — or his own policies.

"We're not monsters, these aren't nasty sessions, there's no tomato throwing," said Lynn McDonald, head of the Toronto-based National Action Committee on the Status of Women.

"It just doesn't make any sense whatsoever unless he feels Liberal policies are not adequate, have fallen behind the Conservatives and the NDP has gone ahead."

The committee's proposal to have the three party leaders make a speech and answer questions at a public forum about the effect of party policies on women was accepted by Prime Minister Clark and NDP Leader Ed Broadbent. Trudeau turned it down but agreed to meet privately with NAC executives in February.

With the Advisory Council on the Status of Women, it has drawn up a list of women's election issues and, as it did in the election campaign last spring, is monitoring the political parties for their response.

Hellie Wilson, Trudeau's adviser on women's rights, says the Liberal strategy is to "integrate women's issues into general policy. They shouldn't be isolated."

Prime Minister Clark has a comprehensive package of promises for women that he will unveil at a NAC meeting Jan. 28 and Broadbent outlined his before NAC last week. The NDP leader also makes a point of promoting equality for women in most of his speeches.

The closest Trudeau has come to making a special pitch to women was last week at 21 McGill, a Toronto women's club, where he promised a $35-a-month increase in the guaranteed income supplement to old age pensioners if Liberals are elected to govern Feb. 18.

Prime Minister Clark said the $570-million pension promise is too expensive. A Progressive Conservative government would help the poor, including the elderly, with tax credits for mortgage interest and property tax payments and for increased home-heating oil costs.

The NDP, says a spokesman, would increase the supplement to an unestimated amount that would be higher than Trudeau's promise. THe NDP spokesman said the Trudeau increase would still leave thousands of elderly below the poverty line.

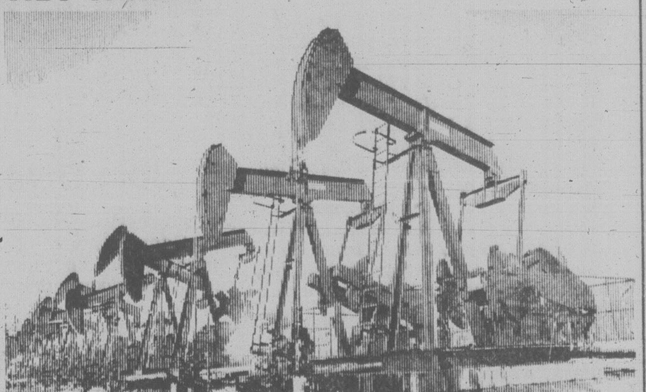
THAT'S WHAT IMPERIAL INVESTED IN CANADA IN 1979... A LOT MORE THAN ITS PROFITS. HERE'S WHERE SOME OF THE MONEY WENT:

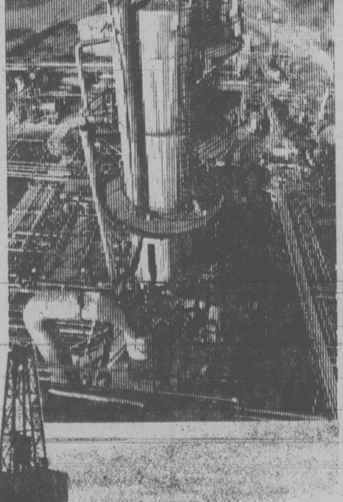
$10,000

That's what one diamond drill bit costs. It may last only a few hours in hard rock. Expensive? Yes. And a part of Imperial's conventional energy exploration investment of $470,000,000 in 1979.



$43,000,000

Getting oil out of the sands of Cold Lake, Alberta, is one of the most important energy projects of this century. The $43,000,000 spent in 1979 is only part of this $7 billion project.

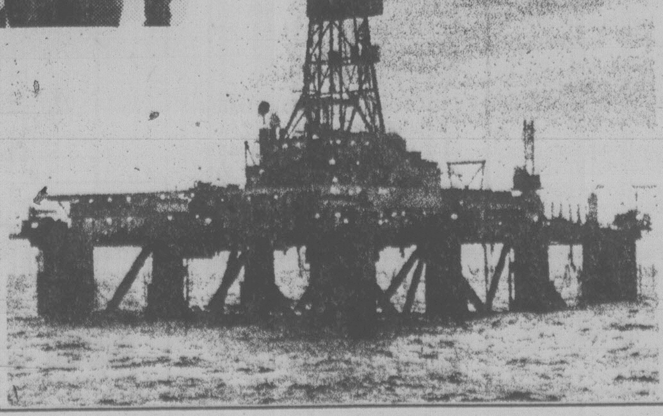


$10,000,000

Modifying Imperial's Dartmouth refinery to handle heavier crude oil cost $10,000,000 in 1979 – part of a $60,000,000 investment. The results will be a more flexible supply of oil for Canada's Atlantic provinces.

$191,000,000

Continued development drilling and expenditures to squeeze more oil and gas from oil wells – both of these are technically complex and very expensive. Additional oil from mature wells can be as significant as a new discovery.



$185,000

That's how much it cost each day to run an off shore drilling rig.

When you think new energy, think billions.

Over the next decade, our investments could total $15 billion. But perhaps the most striking figure of all is the $300,000,000 Imperial had to borrow last year to meet energy investment commitments.

When you hear about oil company profits, we hope you will remember oil company investments.

Fuel subsidy needed in north, says NDP

By ROGER SMITH

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A New Democratic government would bring northern energy costs closer to those in the south through an energy subsidy worth $95.4 million a year, Party Leader Ed Broadbent promised Sunday.

He said subsidies for the Yukon and Northwest Territories would average 30 cents a gallon of gasoline and 35 cents a gallon of home heating oil.

But northern residents of seven provinces — including energy-rich Alberta — would get most of the money from the program which Broadbent said would be paid for out of the $180 million an NDP government would gain by closing tax loopholes for petroleum companies in two areas.

Canada's northern-most regions would qualify and Broadbent said 1.8 million people would benefit.

Based on current consumption, the territories would get subsidies worth $5.9 million while remote areas of Alberta would get $14.1 million.

Broadbent said federal money is used in eastern Canada to make up the difference between the price of imported oil used there and less-expensive domestic oil, but nothing has been done to ease transportation costs for northern residents.

An aide said later the subsidies would be paid to distributors and on much the same basis as the subsidy program for imported oil.

A party policy paper says the subsidies would be paid on a sliding scale based on how far north a community is located and designed to bring prices nearer levels in the south.

The Yukon and the Northwest Territories would get the highest rates. Subsidies for less-remote regions would average 20 cents a gallon on gasoline and 10 cents on heating oil while a third level of remote region would get of 10 cents and five cents respectively.

Only the three Maritime provinces would get no subsidies.

Broadbent, the first party leader to venture this far north during the winter election campaign, told about 500 people at a public meeting the subsidies would mean "about $90 for every man woman and child living north of 60 (degrees latitude)."

The NDP is confident it will sweep the the three northern ridings in the Feb. 18 elections.

To do so, it must hold Nunatsiaq, the sparsely-populated eastern Arctic seat Peter Ittinuar won by 76 votes last May, and win Western Artic on the strength of former MP Wally Firth returning to politics after sitting out the May vote.

Firth, 45, was elected MP for the Northwest Territories in 1972 and 1974. He is up against Progressive Conservative Dave Nickerson, who won the seat by 231 votes in May.

Both Firth and Ittinuar were with Broadbent Sunday when he told his audience northern residents must accept some higher costs for living in that remote area, but that higher energy costs should not be among them.

Using figures obtained in November, he said a gallon of gasoline that cost $1.05 a galon in Winnipeg cost $1.62 in Baker Lake, N.W.T., while a gallon of heating oil costing 65 cents in Winnipeg cost 93 cents in Yellowknife and $1.37 in Baker Lake.

NDP ridings told: Don't hound unions

The presidents of federal NDP riding associations in B.C. have been told not to pester unions for campaign funds.

Yvonne Cocke, the NDP's provincial secretary, has sent a memo to the riding presidents stating: "All financial arrangements, at the request of the trade unions, are being handled centrally."

Cocke said the labor movement decided on the approach to stop the possibility of being badgered by every constituency.

Direct oil deal with Iraq

HALIFAX (CP) — Gulf Canada Ltd. has secured a contract with the Iraq National Oil Co. for supply of 25,000 barrels of oil a day for 11 months from Feb. 1. The oil is for Gulf's Point Tupper, N.S., refinery and the first shipment is due in March.

An announcement from Gulf's Toronto headquarters released here said it is believed to be the first time a Canadian oil company has dealt directly for supplies with a Middle East producer.

The deal was ironed out at talks with the Iraqi State Oil Marketing Organization last week in Baghdad, Gulf said.

Last month, the company announced a supply contract with the Venezuelan state oil company.

Gulf said it is "not out of the woods yet" in securing alternative supplies, but the Iraqi contract was an important step in that effort.

Carter defence flip boost to arms industry

By GEORGE WILSON
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The new Jimmy Carter is racing the engine of the U.S. defence industry.

General Dynamics, the nation's biggest military contractor, is already at the drawing board in hopes of cashing in on Carter's decision to let American companies design and build warplanes specifically for foreign nations. The president had banned this in May, 1977, in an effort to curb trafficking in arms.

McDonnell Douglas, United Technology, Lockheed and Boeing all see millions coming their way as Carter buys planes needed to deliver his proposed new Rapid Development Force to distant spots on the globe.

General Electric, one of the defence industry powers, and Vought Corp., one of the weaklings, are both expected to make money from accelerated development of space weapons as Carter's effort to negotiate a ban on anti-satellite weapons founders.

And Litton, which made millions building the Navy's new family of destroyers, sees more of the same coming from Carter's recent decision to scrap his old shipbuilding program for a more generous one — 95 instead of 67 warships over the next five years.

In short, very good times indeed are just around the corner for many defence contractors, large and small, if Carter's new plans are approved by Congress. The president's fiscal 1981 defense budget, going to Congress this month, calls for spending $142 billion, 11 1-2 per cent higher than this year's figure.

Defence executives are optimistic about their future prospects under Carter but are not yet willing to predict boom times. Most of them warn that defence is a boom-and-bust industry, where today's rhetoric is not necessarily tomorrow's contracts. "How much is enough" for national defence is a question presidents keep changing their minds about.

Take Jimmy Carter, for instance.

As a presidential candidate, he wrote this to the Democratic Platform Committee on June 10, 1976: "Without endangering the defence of our nation or our commitments to our allies, we can reduce present defence expenditures by about $5 billion to $7 billion annually."

As recently as Sept. 14, Carter wrote Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., that "as the result of other economies and improved co-ordination of our defence programs with those of our allies, we should be able to carry out our defence objectives without exceeding the 3 per cent level of annual increase in 1981 or 1982."

But on Dec. 13, Carter's defence secretary, Harold Brown, said the president would ask Congress for "annual increases of about 4.85 per cent a year after inflation" for the Pentagon budgets of fiscal 1981 through 1985.

Carter, who earlier in his term had said no to such costly military items as the B-1 bomber and Nimitz nuclear aircraft carrier, was under pressure to raise the defence budget to win Senate votes for the strategic arms limitation treaty (SALT II). Ironically, he has now taken the further step of also asking that SALT be defered, mainly because of the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

Events in Iran, meanwhile, which under the shah was a heavy purchaser of U.S. arms and is no longer, helped persuade the president of the need for his Rapid Deployment Force. Carter, who once pledged to limit arms sales abroad, is also proposing now to arm such new countries as Pakistan, and has agreed to let U.S. companies sell foreign buyers the FX fighter plane.

'Natural' fluorescent lamp

By STACY V. JONES
New York Times

WASHINGTON — Dr. William A. Thornton Jr., who was awarded two patents last November for a fluorescent lamp that makes objects look virtually as they would under natural light, was chosen this week as Inventor of the Year for 1979. He will be honored Feb. 10 at the annual National Inventors Day Exposition, to be held at the Patent and Trade Mark Office in Arlington, Va.

The selection was made by the Association for the Advancement of Invention and Innovation, which is headed by Edward J. Brenner, a former Commissioner of Patents. An advisory committee voted on 10 nominees. This is the association's seventh annual award.

Thornton is a consultant for Westinghouse Electric Corp. at its Lamp Division in Bloomfield, N.J. The lamp he invented, called the Ultralume, is manufactured by Westinghouse. By coincidence, another fluorescent lamp was patented this week for Westinghouse by Robert G. Young, an engineer in the Lamp Division. Patent 4,184,101 describes it as compact and sealed in a light-transmitting envelope.

At the Feb. 10 ceremony, four inventors, whose names have not yet been announced, will be inducted into the National Inventors Hall of Fame.

Body armor for women has been invented by a woman at the Army Research and Development Plant in Natick, Mass. Patent 4,183,097 was granted this week to Sirvart A. Mellian, a clothing designer on the staff. The invention is described as a contoured, all-fabric garment for the protection of a woman's torso against small arms missiles and fragments of hard material. Ballistically protective layers of plastic fabrics are placed in front and side areas and are joined by overlapping seams.

The armor has not yet been used by the Army, but is reportedly worn by law enforcement personnel in various cities, including New York and Baltimore.

A thermal printer invented at the Product Laboratory of International Business Machines Corp. in Rochester, Minn., is designed to reproduce information received from any source, such as a computer or electronic communication equipment. Dots selected from the 800 on a print-head card can be heated electrically to form letters, figures or line drawings on paper.

Gerald M. Heiling, LaVerne F. Knappe and John L. Regehr, engineers at the laboratory, were granted Patent 4,184,063 this week.

Transmission mechanism for use in electric cars and industrial machinery was patented this week. Domenic Borello, president of Die Mesh Corp. in Pelham, N.Y., got Patent 4,183,253.

The invention includes two cones and a power transfer wheel and is said to provide continually variable output speeds from a constant input, allowing use of a drive motor at its most efficient rate.

Coinage plant site set

FORT SASKATCHEWAN, Alta. (CP) — Sherritt Gordon Mines Ltd. has announced plans for a new $5.5 million coinage plant at the site of its Fort Saskatchewan refinery, rolling mill and mint.

Allan Lee, manager of fabricated metal products with Sherritt Gordon, said Thursday engineering work has already begun. Construction of the new facility is expected to begin this summer and the company plans to begin plant operation by mid-1981.

The new facility will replace a small pilot plant which now produces the specialized coinage material. The pilot plant has been in operation for about three years, starting with a monthly production capacity of 12 tons.

Production was increased to 30 tons monthly in late 1978 and this will rise to more than 100 tons monthly in the new commercial-scale plant.

Lee said the decision to proceed with the expanded plant was based on growing interest in the company's specialized coinage material. The nickel-bonded steel coins and coin blanks are suitable coinage material but are considerably less expensive than traditional coin metals.

The special coinage material was developed at the Fort Saskatchewan research facility and was first sold commercially about three years ago. But Lee said the company has been working on the product for about seven years.

The nickel-bonded steel coins were first used as legal tender in El Salvador. Other foreign clients have included Columbia, Costa Rica and Ecuador.

Car production seesaw has plants hiring, firing

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. automakers are recalling 59,500 workers to assembly plants this week, but additional new layoffs mean the total number of laid-off employees will decline by only 16,750 as the industry continues a seesaw production pattern because of the current sales slump.

About 185,700 employes at five companies will still be at home — 149,800 of them without a recall date — spokesmen for the companies said. The rest will be out for a week or two.

Meanwhile, Ward's Automotive Reports said U.S. auto production last week would be 17 per cent below the previous week's and 40 per cent below the corresponding week last year.

Ford Motor Co. said it was bringing back 31,200 workers to 11 reopening car and truck plants. But Ford announced new temporary layoffs for 13,300 others from four plants to join 3,200 previously announced.

General Motors Corp., which is producing about three out of four cars in the industry these days, said it was restarting four assembly lines and recalling 15,000 workers. GM is closing another line and associated body plant for a week, adding 4,100 to the 15,300 already on temporary layoff.

Chrysler Corp. said it would resume production at three car and two truck plants, with 13,300 workers returning. That left Chrysler with no one on temporary furlough, although Chrysler's total of indefinite layoffs is proportionately the highest of any company.

The 4,000 workers at Volkswagen of America's assembly plant in Westmoreland, Pa., are out because of a strike at a stamping plant.

Changes in the total on indefinite layoff were small. Chrysler added 500 to last week's total of 35,400, Ford's total of 37,500 was 950 more than announced, GM had no changes in its 71,200 and AMC still had 1,200.

Credit union chief turns in resignation

VANCOUVER (CP) — The chief executive officer of the B.C. Central Credit Union says his resignation has nothing to do with the provincial government's $200 million mortgage program.

"It's a coincidental thing," Peter Podovinikoff said Sunday.

Podovinikoff said he submitted his resignation Jan. 12 for "strictly personal" reasons, not because he was dissatisfied with the government's program which is designed to provide cheap mortgages for 3½ years to stimulate demand for B.C. lumber and plywood.

Under the program, the government advanced B.C. credit unions $200 million in provincial funds at 8¼ per cent to be distributed at 9¾ per cent.

Bob Skelly (NDP-Alberni) had said a source told him Podovinikoff resigned because he felt "the government had forced the program on the credit unions and he didn't like it."

"This guy (the source) is in a position to know, but then again he freely admits he was going on a rumor," Skelly said Sunday.

Podovinikoff said he fully supports the mortgage program.

"I think it's an interesting and innovative program and I think it should be a good one," he said.

Welder badly burned in blast

A Saanich man using an arc welder to cut a trailer hitch from his car was severely burned Sunday when the gas tank exploded.

Joseph Henry Greff, 47, of 4336 Layritz, is in fair condition at Victoria General Hospital with second degree burns to his face, arms and legs.

Saanich police said Greff had taken the precaution of emptying the gas tank before using the welder, but glowing fragments of metal were enough to ignite the vapors.

Trucks rifled

Two 20-year-old men were arrested and charged with theft after two trucks were broken into in Victoria overnight Sunday.

Police said a tool box was stolen from a wrecker at Victoria Super Service, Bay and Pleasant, and a quantity of cigarettes taken from a catering truck parked in the 500 block Hillside.

At 12:20 this morning the suspects were arrested as they walked along the street at John and Government. Police said one is from Alberta, the other from Ontario and they had arrived in Victoria two weeks ago.

Assailant hunted

City police are on the lookout for a toque-wearing assailant after a 13-year-old girl was dragged into a yard in Victoria West Sunday night.

The girl told officers she was walking home from a local grocery store about 9 p.m. when she was grabbed by the man in the 700-block Esquimalt and pulled into a yard.

Police said the suspect was described as round-faced with dark, curly hair, about 30.

The girl screamed, pulled free and ran.

Inflation curbs anger Greeks

ATHENS (UPI) — Over half a million shops and small businesses were closed throughout Greece today to protest against government measures aimed at curbing inflation.

The closings included foodstores, bakeries, restaurants and retail stores. Only a few coffee shops and large supermarkets and department stores were open in Athens.

April hike for rates, airlines say

GENEVA (UPI) — World airlines agreed today to increase global passenger and freight rates beginning in April, the International Air Transport Association (IATA) said.

An IATA spokesman said no details of the increases would be available until the meeting officially ends Tuesday.

"The airlines are still going through the routine details of the increases — cargo rate increases are almost finished but passenger fare details need a little more working out," the spokesman said.

The increases were expected, however, to be along the same lines as the hike last July when prices rose between 9 and 15 per cent, depending on the route, geographical location and type of ticket.

A proposed indexing system that would automatically link further fare boosts to increases in operating costs met with opposition from some airlines.

"There is a body of opinion against this system which fears a loss of control over their own commercial decisions if it was put into practice," the spokesman said.

"It is a question here of reconciling two philosophies — but if no agreement is reached the matter will be shelved until a future meeting," he said.

Negotiations for hostages far from a breakthrough

NEW DELHI — A senior United Nations official said Sunday that "major gaps" still exist in negotiations to release American hostages in Tehran.

The remarks came as a clarification of a statement made earlier in the day by U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim that a package for the release of the hostages "had been worked out."

Waldheim made his statement to reporters at New Delhi's Palam Airport shortly after his arrival for the U.N. Industrial Development Organization conference which begins Monday.

Waldheim's press secretary, Rudolf Stajduhar, said the secretary-general's words referred only to the basic framework developed during his visit to Tehran earlier this month.

That framework meets an Iranian demand for an international commission of inquiry to be established to investigate excesses committed during Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi's rule in return for the hostages' release.

However, despite continued negotiations and several moves on the diplomatic front in recent days, the problem of timing still remains unsolved.

"The Iranians still want the inquiry of the commission conducted, and the report of the inquiry submitted and adopted by the Security Council all before discussing the release of the hostages," he said.

The United States has refused any settlement that would put preconditions on the release of the hostages.

While Waldheim said he was hopeful that the mechanism he had worked out would "make it possible to satisfy the government of Iran and lead to the release of the hostages," he said he anticipated no immediate breakthrough.

"This will be a long process," he warned. "One must be fully aware that this will take time and there will be no immediate solution to the problem.

"But the important thing is that we worked out a package, a mechanism which will hopefully make it possible to release the hostages."

Waldheim said he has been in constant telephone contact with Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotsbzadeh in recent days and would be willing to go to Tehran at any time if it could break the deadlock.

U.N. officials close to the secretary-general said that Waldheim was convinced that Iranian leaders were anxious for a negotiated settlement that would set the hostages free.

Some U.N. sources here agree with reports that the expulsion of the American press from Iran last Friday, could be interpreted as a positive sign by Iran's ruling body.

"The Revolutionary Council may be attempting to increase its manoeuvrability to negotiate a deal that would free the hostages," one U.N. source said.

This source believed that the position of the students holding the hostages at the U.S. Embassy could be weakened without constant exposure to the American press. With their hardline position undercut, it could permit the Revolutionary Council to work out a compromise, the source speculated.

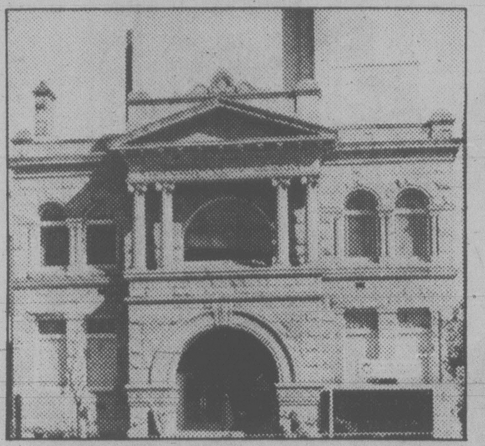
In case you're wondering



What's going to happen to the old Carnegie library?

The old sandstone building at Yates and Blanshard and the more modern library annex at the rear will be empty this spring when the central public library moves four blocks south.

But municipal politicians don't agree on the future of the two structures. They are in a state of limbo at the moment.

The old library was built in 1903 with a grant from the 19th-century steel baron, Andrew Carnegie, and last year was made a heritage landmark by its owner, the city of Victoria. It wants a commercial rent-paying tenant in there, such as a bookstore or art gallery.

However, the fate of the six-storey annex is more complicated. Victoria shares ownership with Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt and the four councils haven't got their act together yet.

The city wants the annex made into a centre for non-profit organizations and cultural groups, but one of the landlords is apparently balking.

Victoria promised to throw in the money it receives from renting the old building to maintain the annex for such a purpose, if the other municipalities go along.

It may be an academic question, however. No one has yet determined whether the annex and the original Carnegie library can be physically separated at a cost which is politically acceptable.

If your interest has been aroused by some feature of Victoria — or even some oddity — write to Wondering, Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas.

By PAT DUFOUR

Sgt. Ken Darling casts critical eye on one of his paintings hanging at dockyard of CFB Esquimalt

Sgt. Ken Darling, a soft-spoken commissioner who works in the Maritime Forces Pacific operations building in the dockyard of CFB Esquimalt, has a double role.

When he's not zeroing in on security, Darling is rapidly becoming the base's personal art historian and resident artist.

Darling began painting less than two years ago. Since then he's done about 60 paintings, working with acrylics, taking about 12 hours for each one.

Darling was born and raised in North Shields at the mouth of the Tyne and came to Canada in 1948. He had gone to sea as a cabin boy when he was 14 and served 10 years with the merchant marine before settling in Edmonton.

He worked at any job he could find and then ran his own sign-painting business for 15 years. "The only thing I was good at in school was art," he explains.

He stumbled into his new hobby by chance.

"I took a heart attack in 1972 and had open-heart surgery. For five years I was pretty useless. I didn't do anything. I made a woollen rug and started working on a book," he recalls.

He adds: "A couple of years ago I was writing some Christmas cards and came across the address of my old art teacher. It was 40 years since I left the old town.

"He is in his 70s, retired and does a lot of painting. He sent a couple of paintings of the old town."

Darling decided to return the compliment and painted a British Columbia scene for his old mentor, who wrote back that it was fresh, clear and powerful. "Just like a school report," Darling recalls.

The die was cast.

The first painting Darling did after that was of his old ship, the RMS (Royal Mail Ship) Queen Mary. He never lost his love of the sea and has painted scores of ships since then. His first canvas, showing a tall ship under full sail, helps turn his office quarters into an instant art gallery.

In the same building one of Darling's paintings hangs on the office wall of Lt.-Col. Charlie Poirier, senior staff officer operations. For Poirier it brings back the time he was flying Trackers from the aircraft carrier Bonaventure.

Another officer in the dockyard, with Darling's help, will relive his Second World War days with painted nostalgia. He has ordered eight paintings, all of ships manned in the war with the exception of one.

He and many others are grateful that Darling discovered that old address two years ago.

Boat victim's body found

The body of a woman drowned during a clam-digging trip Friday was found Sunday morning in a log boom in Sooke Basin.

Mrs. Barbara Planes, 50, of 2615 Otter Point, was lost along with her 52-year-old husband Louis when their boat overturned between Hutchinson Cove and Cooper's Cove about 12:30 a.m. The husband's body has not been recovered. Three other members of the family swam safely to shore when the 15-foot boat upset with its 800-pound load of clams.

Sooke RCMP said the body was held by logs and was spotted when a police boat and local residents conducted a search at 10 a.m. Sunday. The boom was about 750 feet offshore to the east of Sooke Forest Products mill.

Earlier, RCMP divers and a helicopter took part in the search, and the boat was recovered. It bore no sign of having hit an obstruction.

Police said volunteers are continuing the search for Planes' body.

Wildlife sanctuary urged

Council should purchase private land north of Queensbury that forms part of Kings Pond and manage it because the body of water supports all kinds of bird, small mammal and insect life, Laurenson says in a report.

Victoria Natural History Society asked council last September to turn the area in to a wildlife preserve and after investigating the request the planning department agrees, the report says.

Ottawa says no to Trident

The federal government has given a final no on further financing for Trident Aircraft of Sidney.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said today he was advised of that decision Sunday by the federal minister for small business and industry, Ron Huntington.

Curtis, MLA for Saanich and the Islands, called it a "great disappointment."

Curtis said when he met with Huntington Saturday there appeared to be a reasonable chance that the federal minister would change his mind about cutting off funding for Trident.

"Mr. Huntington then telephoned me Sunday to inform me that the federal government was unable or unwilling to participate with B.C. and the B.C. Development Corporation in ensuring that the firm remain in operation."

Trident president Jerome Vaverek said Huntington was favorable Saturday to the company's position, but "turned tail again Saturday night" and unilaterally decided against renewing the federal loan guarantees for the company.

Provincial Indiustry Minister Don Phillips called Huntington's decision "ridiculous" and said if the Trident plant had been in Ontario, the federal government would have found no problem in funding it.

"Precisely what B.C. can do now, on its own, is a matter which will require urgent and careful review," Curtis said.

"The loss of jobs is devastating for the individuals and families concerned, but the scuttling of a highly professional and skilled team of aircraft industry workers in the Capital Region also has an impact far beyond the dollars and cents of a payroll," Curtis added.

Maggie rumored staying afloat

Will the B.C. government have to eat crow and announce this month that the Princess Marguerite will be left on the Victoria-Seattle run again this year?

That's the rumor floating around Seattle according to Glen Lee, spokesman for a Seattle-based committee interested in keeping the 30-year-old steamship on the run.

He said in a telephone interview from Kennewick, Wash., rumor has it the Marguerite will be renovated to allow it to operate on the run for another two or three years. After that one of the larger B.C. Ferry Corp. vessels will be put on, Lee said.

The government announced in November that the Marguerite will not be used again on the popular summer run.

The government said in December it would cost $3 million a year to charter a replacement and between $12 million and $14 million to buy one.

Cedric Steele, president of the Chamber of Commerce, said today the government maintains in statements to his group that there will be a replacement for the Marguerite this summer.

Lee, however, said there is no way the government has time to charter a vessel and get it here and in shape for the opening of the season.

Trustees' pay 'downgrading' says Parrott

The president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association said today she favors giving trustees the power to set their own salaries.

"I think school trustees should have the same rights as municipal officers," said Ruby May Parrott, referring to salary-setting power accorded by the Municipal Act to mayors and aldermen.

At present B.C. trustees are limited by the Public Schools Act to a $2,000 annual stipend, a situation Education Minister Brian Smith says is too little to properly reimburse trustees for their duties.

Said Parrott: "I certainly agree with him."

What rankles trustees, Parrott said, is that the act appears to downgrade their responsibility, even though many school districts have budgets far exceeding municipal budgets.

Prior to the $2,000 limit, trustees were paid on a sliding scale based on the size of the school district, which meant that trustees in smaller districts suffered, often working harder than urban trustees because their administrative staffs were smaller.

Smith said a general revision of the School Act would not take place until after the next sitting of the legislature.

He wants to hold a series of public meetings on the subject first, so that he and his senior administrators can get direct response from taxpayers.

Parrott said she hopes any philosophical changes would be developed through elected people rather than bureaucrats, although administrators could make some improvements to make the act more readable.

Smith said he intends to give community colleges and trades training much of his attention. Some enrolments have jumped 15 per cent this year.

Silver prices rise but coins bringing less

The price of silver is going up almost daily but coin dealers have lowered the price they're paying for silver coins.

Right now, dealers have a problem disposing of the coins, since most refineries can't take any more metal at present.

Most silver coins now are being bought for 13-to-17 times their face value, compared to up to 20 times during the height of the silver fever a few weeks ago.

"We're still buying, but we've got no place to sell it," said Michael Levy, who owns coin concessions at local Woodward's stores throughout B.C..

"The refiners are so backed up with silver that the major ones are not able to take any more until the first of May."

Levy said he is "buying cheap enough so that we can afford to be able to hold it for awhile," but was selling coins to interested buyers at up to 28 times their face value.

"We're still getting lineups every day, buying and selling," he said. "Business has been phenomenal."

Final bridge work

The Johnson Street bridge was closed all day Sunday for the last phase of a $1 million repair job. Crews replaced bearings on the western approach span and to install a guardrail. The bridge will be closed to all traffic again next Sunday from 8 a.m. to midnight.

Terry's tosses chased the demons

Losing fears troubled Steeler star

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) -Something was very wrong. Terry Bradshaw just couldn't shake the feeling — Pittsburgh Steelers were going to lose their football battle.

It was early Sunday morning, 12 hours before kickoff. The quarterback sat up in bed, suddenly wide awake after drifting off to sleep three hours earlier.

He closed his eyes again. It did no good. The feeling was still there. He turned on the television, watched the test pattern and listened to the high-pitched whine accompanying it for the rest of the night.

The hours drifted by. Still no sleep.

"All I could think about was losing," Bradshaw recalled later — after he had chased away the demons with yet another most-valuable-player performance in Pittsburgh's 31-19 Super Bowl victory over Los Angeles Rams.

"It was weird," said Bradshaw, whose 309 yards passing (14 for 21) was within nine yards of the record he set a year ago. "It just wasn't like me, not being able to sleep before a big game.

"Last year, before Dallas (the Steelers beat the Cowboys 35-31), I didn't have any trouble. I never had any negative thoughts. I never think about losing. I had to say to myself, 'Stop that, now. Think positive.' Finally, it worked."

Then there was the small matter of asserting himself with his team-mates.

"I think I had more of a leadership role this time," Bradshaw said. "I really took charge and tried to juice 'em. I never do that. But I really took control of the team. Usually I just go out and play the game. But I felt I wasn't involved, and I thought 'If I'm not involved, maybe they're not involved,' so I made a point of pumping 'em, getting them going, getting them excited."

When?

"At the start of the second half, after I got myself juiced up. That wasn't tough at all. I mean, 13-10 got me juiced up real good."

That was the Rams' lead, technically built on Cullen Bryant's one-yard run and field goals of 31 and 45 yards by Frank Corral but, in fact, built on the cool passing of young quarterback Vince Ferragamo and some explosive running by Wendell Tyler.

Ferragamo was starting only his eighth pro game. He was supposed to crack under the pressure. He never came close.

"That didn't surprise me a bit," Steelers' coach Chuck Noll said. "Nothing about the Rams surprised me, especially their quarterback. He's a fine one.

"I told Terry before the game that he would have to come up with the big play," Noll added.

With 2:48 gone in the third period, Bradshaw went to Swann, unloading a bomb that the lithe wide receiver caught with a leap at the two-yard line. He tumbled into the end zone to complete the 47-yard scoring play. It put the Steelers back on top 17-13.

Undaunted, Ferragamo came back with a 50-yard bomb to Billy Waddy, then handed off to running back Lawrence McCutcheon, who pitched a 27-yard option pass to Ron Smith for a touchdown and a 19-17 Ram lead that remained that way when Corral missed the extra point.

The big play, Noll had said.

With 2:56 gone in the fourth period and Swann sidelined with a concussion (he was cartwheeled by Pat Thomas in the third quarter), Bradshaw went to Stallworth, who had faked an inside route, then had taken off downfield. The bomb was perfect, Stallworth gathering it in at the Rams' 32 as Thomas lunged in vain, then going the rest of the way to complete the 73-yard play that put Pittsburgh ahead to stay.

The Steelers wrapped it up when Harris, who had gotten their first touchdown on a one-yard sweep in the second period, bulled in from the one again with 1:52 to go. It came three plays after a pass-interference penalty against Thomas for bumping Jim Smith in the end zone.

It was the only controversial call, and the Rams really didn't argue too loudly. "He tried to take the position away from the receiver," referee Fred Silva said of Thomas's contact. "He was not playing the ball."

Harris's clinching touchdown came eight plays after Jack Lambert, the Steelers' middle linebacker, broke the Rams' backs by intercepting a Ferragamo pass at the Pittsburgh 14-yard line.

The interception and touchdown finally allowed the Steelers to breathe easily against a team which most observers felt would be blown out of the Rose Bowl long before the extravagant halftime show — complete with a giant fireworks display — blew smoke all over the San Gabriel Mountains.

"I never thought that," Noll insisted. "I knew we'd be in for a tough time. The Rams are a very good defensive team. The only reason we scored what we did was a few big plays. Without them, we wouldn't have beaten them."

"They didn't outplay us," coach Ray Malavasi of the Rams added. "We just didn't get the big plays. I thought we were going to win right from the beginning and I thought so right to the end."

And when the end finally came, clearly half of the Super Bowl record 103,985 spectators whooped it up, waving the yellow towels which have become the Steelers' unofficial trademark.

Humility, dignity and some grace

Times News Services

PASADENA, Calif. — He stood on a one-foot podium, his bare midriff showing beneath a cut-off undershirt, a red baseball cap sitting rakishly on his head and one hand clutching chewing tobacco.

Knee-deep in reporters, microphones and clicking cameras, he looked beat but happily relieved and like anything but the most valuable player of the Super Bowl.

"I was surprised to get the MVP," said Terry Bradshaw. "Usually, it doesn't go to someone who throws three interceptions."

Then, as if recalling that the honor brings him a new sports car, he added quickly, "But I'll take it."

It was typical of the old bald eagle of the Pittsburgh Steelers who, as quarterback not only led his awesomely-talented, hard-hitting team-mates to an unprecedented fourth Super Bowl crown, but also matched Bart Starr's consecutive-game MVP honors won in 1966 and 1967.

He basked in the victory limelight with dignity and grace.

And humility — especially humility.

He did not thrust out his chest. He refused to gloat. He had nothing but praise for his beaten adversary, Los Angeles Rams, beaten 31-19 in one of the most exciting slugfests in the 14-year history of the season-end extravaganza, and the team's raw young quarterback Vince Ferragamo.

"This one was the toughest," he said, looking back over the Steelers' previous triumphs in 1975, 1976 and last year.

"They were really charged up. We had doubts, especially in the first half when we were lethargic. Every time we'd score, they would come back at us. Ferragamo played a super game."

Although intercepted three times, Bradshaw produced one of his finest performances, completing 14 of 21 passes for 309 yards and two touchdown passes. With his ninth touchdown pass, he moved ahead of Roger Staubach's Super Bowl career record.

Bradshaw was particularly pleased with his two long passes to wide receiver John Stallworth in the final quarter — the first a 73-yard guided missile early in the period to take the lead, the second a 45-yarder with five minutes to go that set up the final touchdown.

"The first one was the big one," he said. "The second one drove the nail in the coffin."

In the Rams' dressing room, Jack Youngblood limped, he was tired, and the sheer exhaustion had made him sick to his stomach. But, speaking softly, he said he felt good in one regard.

"I think we showed a lot of people that we can play football," said Youngblood, the Rams' perennial All-Pro defensive end who played despite a hairline fracture in his left leg.

"We had the chance to be great and we didn't quite make it," said Los Angeles defensive end Fred Dryer. "The Steelers are the champs — great champs — and I respect them.

"But they know it could have been us instead of them."

Two Rams, who had played almost error-free football for the first three periods, made two costly mistakes in the closing moments. The first came when Ferragamo threw an interception that stopped a drive in Steeler territory, the second when cornerback Pat Thomas was called for pass interference in the end zone to set up Pittsburgh's final score.

"We could have won if I hadn't thrown that interception," said Ferragamo, who completed 15 of 25 passes for 212 yards and suffered just the one interception.

Of the pass interference call, Rams' coach Ray Malavasi said, "It was just a bad call. I could see it clearly from the sidelines, and Thomas did not interfere."

Thomas, who tangled with Pittsburgh receiver Jim Smith on the play, would say only, "It was a sorry call."

As they celebrated, the rest of the Steelers were unified in their praise of the Rams.

"I had a lot of respect for the Rams before the game," said centre Mike Webster. "I have more now."

Tackle Joe Greene said: "They didn't surprise me, they scared me. I think Ferragamo played a super game. He threw the ball well. He called the right plays. We just had too many good football players."

Celtics fail to foul and Sonics cash in

By Associated Press

Boston Celtics knew what to do Sunday, but they just couldn't do it.

As a result, Dennis Johnston got off a three-point field goal that tied the game for Seattle at the buzzer ending regulation play, and the SuperSonics went on to beat the Celtics 108-106 in double overtime in a National Basketball Association game.

"We wanted to foul," Boston coach Bill Fitch said. "We planned on fouling, but we couldn't get to the ball in time. It was a physical error, not a mental one."

Sonics' coach Lenny Wilkens said his team's first option was to get the ball to Fred Brown. "My main worry was that the Celtics would foul before we got a shot."

But, said Fitch, veteran centre Dave Cowens committed a decisive error. After Sonics called a timeout with three seconds left to set up the final shot, Seattle tried to throw the ball in bounds and Cowens batted it out before it reached big Jack Sikma. That used up one second and Johnson scored after the ensuing throw-in.

"Dave overhustled," Fitch said. "The ball came in to Sikma and Dave knocked it back out instead of letting Sikma get it and then fouling him."

After Johnson's heroics before a packed Boston Garden crowd of 15,320, Gus Williams scored 12 of his game-high 29 points in the two overtime periods and the Sonics handed Boston only its third loss in 23 home starts this season. The Celtics were led by guard Chris Ford, who scored 26 points including five three-pointers.

In Sunday's only other NBA game, Milwaukee Bucks edged Portland Trail Blazers 89-88 when Brian Winters sank a 20-foot jumper from the top of the key with four seconds remaining.

On Saturday, it was Philadelphia 111-107 over Cleveland, Detroit 122-110 over Houston, Indiana 108-103 over Kansas City, San Antonio 130-117 over Washington, Chicago 117-108 over Denve, Utah 116-99 over Golden State and Phoenix 137-123 over San Diego.

In Greater Victoria Senior High School Girls' Basketball League games at 6:30, Mt. Douglas will visit Esquimalt and Lambrick Park is at Claremont.

Victoria Club rinks sweep South Island mixed

By BILL WALKER

It was a clean sweep for rinks from the Victoria Curling Club in the South Island mixed curling playdowns at Playland Club over the weekend.

All four qualifiers for the Island final, which will be held at Victoria, Feb. 8-10, will be at home for that event.

Rob Cummings, a qualifier last year, and veteran Harvey Hodge took the two "A" side berths Saturday.

Wilkinson scored two big three enders, on the fifth and eighth ends, to defeat clubmate Steve Skillings 9-6, while Horrigan stole three in the fifth and a single in the sixth en route to a 9-2 victory over Doug Benedict, who was skipping yet another VCC rink.

Cummings edged Wilkinson 9-8 on the strength of three in the ninth end in his "A" final win, while Hodge had little trouble in turning back Horrigan 8-3.

Both Wilkinson and Horrigan dropped into the "B" finals off their loss in "A".

Skillings got there in a fortunate manner when Doug Conn missed a last-rock takeout in an extra end that would have given him a victory as he dropped a 10-9 decision. Benedict edged Don Matheson of the Racquet Club 7-5.

Personnel on South Island qualifying rinks are:

Gary Wilkinson, Shirley Gray, Ray Paine, Phyl Bird (VCC);

Rob Cummings, Crystal Lockyer, Kim Browning, Sandy Martin (VCC).

North Island representatives in the Island final will be rinks skipped by Fred Duncan and Joe Cyr of Port Alberni and Dennis Heppelle of Duncan and Jack Doan of Nanaimo.

Martin defeated Audrey Duff of the Racquet Club 13-8 and Audrey Webb of Playland 10-6.

Lee Jameson of Oak Bay also was a double winner. Jameson defeated Ruth Wallin of Juan de Fuca 9-7 and Elin Petch of Victoria 10-9 in an extra end. Petch earlier defeated Shirley Lockhart of Kerry Park 11-6.

In other games, Claire Duncan of VCC won from clubmate Ruth Miller 13-0 and Webb defeated Mary Wilkinson of Juan de Fuca 12-8.

The seniors tournament continues with two draws today, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Howie Ward of Esquimalt branch, the "A" event winner, also was forced into an extra game before winning out over Norm Richardson of Trafalgar 9-1 in the seniors category final.

Playing with Austin were Jack McBeth, Ken Wardell and Tom Prokopow. With Ward were Joe Iannarelli, Al Patterson and Bill Crothers.

In the B.C. Winter Games Zone 6 playoff at the Racquet Club, Bob Gallaugher of Playland defeated clubmate Ernie Hawkins 9-4 in the men's final and Linda Castle of Kerry Park defeated Stell Petrie of the Racquet Club 9-7 in the women's division.

Gallaugher now meets Gaye Enns of Campbell River in a best-of-three playoff for the Island games berth at Playland, Saturday, with the first game at 9 a.m.

Castle, with her win, has qualified for the Winter Games which will be held at Kimberley, March 1-2.

Oilers on move

Times News Services

Edmonton Oilers, still a long way from a .500 hockey club, continued to show improvement Sunday night by picking up a point in Buffalo at the tail end of a four-game road trip.

The 4-4 tie gave the Oilers their fifth point of a possible eight during a strenuous five-day excursion, an effort which moved Edmonton to fourth spot in Smythe Division standings in this its first National Hockey League season.

The Oilers rely heavily on centre Wayne Gretzky, who turns 19 on Saturday. In his second full season of professional hockey, the Brantford, Ont., native is fifth in NHL scoring with 25 goals and 42 assists.

"We're gaining confidence," Gretzky said of the team's improved play. "If we have the puck they can't score. The best defence is good offence."

Stan Weir, a nine-year pro who scored twice Sunday to increase his season's output to 22, said the Oilers are playing better positional hockey and working harder.

"Before, we were playing as individuals. Now, we're playing as a team."

Brett Callighen's goal at 15:18 of the third and final period gave the Oilers the tie. Bobby Schmautz also scored for Edmonton. Rick Martin, with two, Gil Perreault and Rick Dudley scored for the Sabres.

Elsewhere, Chicago Black Hawks defeated the Rangers 2-1 in New York and the Nordiques downed Washington Capitals 3-2 in Quebec.

The Oilers now have 34 points on 12 wins and 10 ties in 45 games. They've enjoyed relative success against the Sabres, who have the second best over-all points total in the league. Edmonton has won one and tied one in three meetings between the clubs.

Roy Smith 13th as Waltrip wins

RIVERSIDE — Darrell Waltrip overcame the loss of one lap because of a flat tire and charged from behind to nip Dale Earnhardt and win the rain-delayed NASCAR Western 500 Grand National stock car race at Riverside International Raceway on Saturday.

Roy Smith of Victoria finished 13th after starting 34th in a field of 37 and losing time midway through the race because of a minor crash.

Waltrip, a 32-year-old veteran who won seven races last season, finished about three seconds ahead of Earnhardt, NASCAR's 1979 rookie of the year.

A yellow flag on the 82nd lap, which came out when Cecil Gordon's car stopped on the track in the second turn, was the big break for Waltrip, who had pitted only seconds before. He used the one-lap yellow to catch the leaders, Yarborough — who had built a big lead — and Petty. Petty, the defending NASCAR point champion, finished third.

Moose make it two in a row

Powell River Moose defeated Saanich 6-3 Sunday to win the sixth annual Racquet Club of Victoria bantam hockey tournament for the second straight year.

Powell River won all four games to top the Gold Division in round-robin action while Saanich advanced to the final by edging out Fuller Lake on a goals-for-and-against basis after the two clubs had topped the Blue Division with 3-1 records.

Drew Ferrill scored two goals and an assist in the final to lead Saanich, which outshot Powell River 36-27 but couldn't overcome the solid goaltending of Tyler Findlater.

Glenn Maglio of Juan de Fuca was named to the all-star team as goalie, Ron Viglasi of Powell River and Louis Strobl of Kerry Park were picked as defensemen and Troy Dawson of Saanich, Peter McCormack of Fuller Lake and Brian Deleeuw of Fuller Lake were named as forwards.

Results of other Sunday and Saturday games:

Fuller Lake 8, Comox 5.
Port Alberni 4, Juan de Fuca 3.

King trims rival in singles final

KYOTO, Japan (Reuter) — All-England champion Liem Swie King, 23, of Indonesia overpowered Masao Tsuchida of Japan 15-16, 15-10 to win the men's singles in the World Cup badminton championships Sunday.

Eastman curries favor with shutout of Bruins

Moral received a boost here and there Saturday as Victoria Cougars reclaimed top place in the Western Hockey League's Western Division with their solid 6-0 victory over New Westminster Bruins.

First and foremost was the restoration of Kevin Eastman's ego.

Shunted to a backup role because of a pre-Christmas slump, Eastman was brought back as an alternating starter by coach Jack Shupe during Cougars' recent, five-game tour through the Eastern Division.

Eastman played well in his road games, and confidence didn't suffer Saturday when the Ladysmith product recorded his first-ever WHL shutout. He earned it with a 21-stop performance before 3,026 fans at Memorial Arena.

The ultimate zero-saving stop came in the dying minutes when a glaring defensive miscue enabled New Westminster's Dan Sylvester to take an unhampered run at the Victoria netminder. Eastman responded with a spectacular skate save to give Victoria its third shutout of the season (rookie Grant Fuhr accounted for the first two).

Also gaining in the confidence department was rookie forward Grant Rezansoff. He came up with a two-goal, one-assist performance to spark Cougars' offense.

Cougars, now 9-0 over New Westminster this season, face the Bruins tonight in Vancouver's PNE Coliseum and then play the second-place Winter Hawks Wednesday in Portland.

In other action Sunday, Lethbridge Broncos snapped a three-game losing streak with an 8-5 victory over Regina Pats; the East Division-leading Calgary Wranglers clipped Saskatoon Blades 8-4, and Brandon Wheat Kings won their fourth straight by downing Seattle Breakers 6-1.

Texan stands tall

PHOENIX (AP) - Jeff Mitchell won it in a walk, scoring a four-stroke victory Sunday in the $300,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament.

In winning his first tournament in four years on the Professional Golfers' Association tour, Mitchell closed with a four-under-par round of 67 and a 272 total.

Mitchell, 25, a Lubbock, Tex., product, won $54,000, which compares with the $38,032 he won all of last year.

BRIAN POCKAR. . . brilliant free-skating program

Skating champs rebound from personal disasters

KITCHENER, Ont. (CP) — Brian Pockar and Heather Kemkaran have proved that they have the ability to rebound from personal disasters in the pressure-packed world of figure-skating.

Pockar and Kemkaran both responded positively from earlier disappointments to capture the senior singles titles Saturday at the Canadian championships, capping the four-day event with brilliant free-skating programs.

In winning his third straight men's singles crown, Pockar had to fight from behind and overtake Gary Beacom of Toronto, who led after the figures and short program. Beacom also had finished ahead of Pockar last September in the Flaming Leaves competition at Lake Placid, N.Y.

Kemkaran regained her women's singles title from Janet Morrissey of Ottawa with a near-flawless, free-skating program.

"If there's one thing I've learned this year," said Pockar, "it's that you can never be in too good shape physically because your stamina can always be better.

"You can always jump higher, you can always spin faster, everything can improve. It was tough this year, altogether tougher than last year."

Pockar's five-minute, free-skating program was highlighted by four triple jumps and, perhaps more importantly, a look of grim determination on the face of the 20-year-old University of Calgary commerce student. He knew he had a fight on his hands and he wanted to prove to everbody that a champion can fight back.

"I know what Gary (Beacom) went through tonight because it's happened to me," Pockar said.

Beacom had perhaps the most-imaginative free-skating program, but he fell three times and slipped on another occasion, losing confidence as he went along. He finished in third place, behind Gordon Forbes of Brockville, Ont.

Forbes put on a stirring performance and landed six triple jumps. He was physically and emotionally drained after his program, almost unable to cope with the thought of having lost after skating his best.

Pockar and Kemkaran will have to wait until Tuesday before they learn whether the Canadian Olympic Association will send them to the Winter Olympics next month at Lake Placid.

The COA selection committee will meet with Charles Dover, president of the Canadian Figure Skating Association, in Montreal. Dover will recommend that Canada send eight skaters to the Olympics — two dance teams, a pairs team and one entry in both the men's and women's singles.

Lorna Wighton and John Dowding of Toronto, the sixth-ranked ice dancers in the world, so far are the only Canadians assured of going to Lake Placid. They easily defended their title Saturday before an appreciative crowd of about 6,000 at the Kitchener Auditorium.

The pairs team of Barbara Underhill and Paul Martini also were successful in defence of their senior title.

Kemkaran, 21, the 1978 women's senior champion, put the pressure on Morrissey right from the start in figures and never allowed the defending-champion a chance.

"All the years I skated up to 1978, when I won the title, had nothing near to the work that went into my program for this competition," said Kemkaran, who suffered a major setback when she lost her title last year.

Morrissey finished a respectable second and third was Tracey Wainman, the 12-year-old sensation from Toronto who received the biggest hand of the night from the crowd as she skated her first-ever four-minute program.

Another youngster who showed potential for the future was Diane Mae Ogibowski, 14, of Minnedosa, Man. She won the novice women's singles by jumping from ninth place to the top on the strength of her free-skating.

The novice competition wound up with Lloyd Eisler of Seaforth, Ont., claiming the men's title, and Darryl Clark of Courtenay, who skates out of the Racquet Club of Victoria, finishing second ahead of Ghislain Briand of St. Laurent, Que.

Clubmates Carrie Hawkes and Daryl Hatton were 12th in the novice dance event while Susy Hetherington, second after figures competition, was unable to remain with the leaders during freestyle programs in the junior women's event.

Bozan keeps his cool and defeats Stenmark

WENGEN, Switzerland (AP) — Bozan Krizaj of Yugoslavia, twice runner-up this season, finally made it to the top Sunday, edging Swedish ski star Ingemar Stenmark by 17 one-hundredths of a second to win over the toughest slalom course on the World Cup circuit.

Zigzagging down the steep course with elegance and perfect rhythm, the 23-year-old student was faster than the Swede in both runs for a total time of one minute, 27.30 seconds.

Paul Frommelt of Liechtenstein was third.

"It was the first race in which I kept my cool throughout," said Krizaj. "I have been ahead of Stenmark several times in first runs but then I always got nervous and lost. This time, it was different . . . at last."

Stenmark, who has won two giant slalom races but only one special slalom this World Cup season, said he was pleased with the outcome and that he was in fine shape for the Olympic Games next month.

Andreas Wenzel, Frommelt's team-mate, missed a gate early in the first run and was disqualified. That enabled Stenmark to replace him atop the over-all World Cup standings. Stenmark has 113 points to 100 for Wenzel. Krizaj moved to third with 100, followed by Peter Mueller of Switzerland, winner of Saturday's downhill, at 87 and Ken Read of Calgary, second in the downhill after winning Friday, fifth with 79 points.

Krizaj's victory and a fifth and 11th place for two Soviet entries, Vladimir Andreyev and Alexander Chirov, were fresh evidence of fast-gaining east European strength in alpine skiing.

Nadig confirms role

BADGASTEIN, Austria (AP) — Marie-Therese Nadig of Switzerland won her sixth downhill of the World Cup ski season Sunday, confirming her role as clear favorite in the Winter Olympics at Lake Placid.

Nadig, a 25-year-old sports shop owner, edged archrival Annemarie Moser-Proell of Austria by three-tenths of a second, making experts predict a dramatic duel at the Olympics.

The strongly-built Swiss skier defeated the Austrian and won both the downhill and giant slalom Olympic golds at Sapporo, Japan, in 1972. Sunday, Nadig posted a time of one minute, 58.09 seconds over the 3,916-metre course, with a vertical drop of 698 metres and 31 orientation gates. Moser-Proell was timed in 1:58.39.

Wenzel takes slalom event

— BADGASTEIN, Austria (Reuter) — Hanni Wenzel of Liechtenstein won a women's World Cup slalom ski event today with an aggregate time of one minute 32.44 seconds for two runs.

Perrine Pelen of France took second place in 1:32.79 and Erika Hess of Switzerland was third in 1:33.10.

Marilyn McKinnon of the winners was selected as the tournament's most-valuable player. Others named to the all-star team were: Kelly Curtis of Reynolds, Sue Hagel of Colquitz, Trish Wellman of Cedar Hill and Heather Gill of Stelly's.

On the mainland, unranked Cowichan Thunderbirds captured first place in the senior high school boys' North Vancouver Britannia tournament while in the St. Thomas More Challenger tournament, second-ranked Nanaimo Islanders went down to a second defeat.

Cowichan trimmed Carson-Graham 72-56 in the tournament final Saturday and Greg Walters of the Birds was named winner of the most-valuable-player award.

In Burnaby, Nanaimo dropped a 76-75 decision to top-ranked Richmond Colts as Kamloops Red Devils captured the tournament with a 94-78 victory over Prince George Condors. Earlier, Nanaimo had lost to St. Jerome of Kitchener, Ont.

* * *

In local exhibitions, Victoria High School Totems downed North Surrey 68-64 and Abbotsford Panthers, seventh-ranked provincially, defeated Oak Bay Bays 63-60.

Creery tops runners with best-ever time

VANCOUVER — Victoria's Mike Creery registered his best time ever for the distance in capturing a five-mile contest Saturday at Stanley Park in the first of eight CP Air Grand Prix running races.

Creery ran the distance in 24 minutes and eight seconds, cutting 40 seconds off his previous best effort. Paul Williams of Ontario was second in 24:18 and John Hill (24:20) of Vancouver was third.

Randy Cox of Victoria Mercuries was fourth and qualified in a B.C. test leading to Canadian trials for the world cross-country championship scheduled for Paris in March. Terry Bateman of Victoria was fourth in the junior division and may also qualify for the national trials.

Masters collect berth in Games

Victoria Masters rallied to trip Port Alberni 70-63 Sunday at Central Junior High School and earn a berth in the British Columbia Winter Games basketball event at Kimberley, Feb. 23-24.

Court Brousson fired 17 points and John Lauvaas added 14 to lead the Masters, who trailed 30-26 at halftime but came back to take the lead for good immediately after the break.

The Victoria squad had defeated Port Alberni 90-81 and clipped Powell River 52-48 in the round-robin segment of the tourney Saturday while Port Alberni bounced Powell River, 81-70.

Sunday's scoring:

VICTORIA (70) — Dale Briggs, Dave Turkington 5, Tom Wyatt 4, John Devlin, Ken McCulloch 6, Pete Simmonds 12, John Olson 8, Court Brousson 17, John Lauvaas 14, Wayne Allen 4; PORT ALBERNI (63) — Larry Lehtonen 18, Bill Andrews 4, Rick Burnip 10, Don Krego 10, Tom Watts 4, Renger Derries 8, Gary Panton 9, Neil Dirom.

Printers trim hoop rivals

Mary Coutts fired 32 points to lead Morriss Printing to a 61-43 victory over Williams Automotive in a Greater Victoria Senior "B" Women's Basketball League game Sunday at Central Junior High School.

Marcia Thompson notched 13 points while Gail Surakka and Mavis Stokke each added six for the Printers.

Tickner retains title

ATLANTA (AP) — The top U.S. figure skaters have passed the national hurdle and are looking toward the Olympics, confident that their bad dress rehearsals at the U.S. figure skating championships were a necessary buildup to good performances in Lake Placid.

The results of the championships that ended Saturday were as expected, with Charlie Tickner winning his fourth straight national title to gain the lead berth on the men's Olympic team.

Linda Fratianne also held on to her women's crown, but barely, for the fourth consecutive year and the world champion pairs team of Tai Babilonia and Randy Gardner won their fifth U.S. title.

The skaters and their coaches admit they'll have to do better in Lake Placid to win medals. So they're going home for intensive training, confident of better results next month.

Soviets take three

MEGEVE, France (CP) — Soviet skaters swept three of the four titles and the team event here at the world junior figure skating championships.

It was in the women's event, won by Rosalyn Sumners of the United States, that Canada had its best showing — a silver medal taken by Kay Thomson of Toronto.

On Friday, Neil Paterson of Vancouver ranked sixth in the men's event that was won by Aleksandr Fadeev. No Canadians were entered in the pairs.

Victoria, ahead 46-38 at the half, shot 58 per cent from the field compared with 51 per cent for the Birds, who lost to the Vikings for the second time in as many nights.

Atkin's performance paced an across-the-board strong showing by Calgary. All 11 players saw floor time and all scored points, with Romel Raffin adding 20 and Eric Durkson 11.

In Lethbridge, the winning teams had to come back from halftime deficits. The Pronghorn men trailed 39-33 at halftime before overcoming the Bears. Perry Merkovich scored 32 for Lethbridge, with Ernie Hull getting 14. Tom Groat had 23 for Alberta.

Janis Paskevich scored 24 to lead the Dinnies over the Huskiettes. Shelly Ready's 21 points topped the Saskatchewan effort.

The Pandas were behind 38-25 at the half. Aided by Trix Kannekens' 15 points and 11 from Glynis Griffiths, they turned around and bested the Pronghorn women, who got 16 points from Pam Mann.

Vikes pull shocker on Wests

University of Victoria Vikings, sparked by some excellent goaltending from Ted Van Waes, toppled Victoria West 4-2 Saturday at Royal Athletic Park to move to within one point of the beaten leaders in the first division of the Vancouver Island Soccer League.

In other first division matches Sunday, Powell River Villas trampled Castaways 6-2 at Topaz Park; Victoria Athletics blanked Cosmopolitan Royals 2-0 at Blanshard Field and Meston's Auto Body edged Oak Bay 1-0 at Heywood Avenue Park.

Mark Yawney opened scoring for Vikings at six minutes and numerous saves by Van Waes enabled UVic to keep the 1-0 lead through the remainder of the first half.

Dave Secco scored on a cross from Jim Palm to make it 2-0 at 52 minutes and four minutes later Palm, too, managed to connect.

John McGuire scored the first goal for Vic West at 59 minutes but John Dison snared Peter Zachary's rebound at the 72-minute mark to bring back the three-goal advantage.

Rob Williams counted the final Vic West goal at 79 minutes.

Graham Hollingsworth scored two penalty goals early in the second half to expand the 2-1 halftime advantage enjoyed by Powell River and put the match out of reach for Castaways.

Ian Orchison also scored twice for Powell River while Phil Geligos and Brian Gomez added singles. Steve Bowers and Brian Heaps countered for Castaways.

Athletics pulled into a third-place tie with idle Gorge by scoring two late goals — the first at 82 minutes by George Pakos and the other three minutes later on a penalty shot by Dave McCaig. The scoring ended a domination of the game by Royals and goalkeeper Grant Darley of Athletics preserved his shutout with several key saves, including one on a breakaway by Brock Coupar.

Oak Bay goalie Steve Akem was also outstanding and even managed to deflect a penalty shot by Joe Mendonca.

Allan Blue early choice for Plate

TORONTO (CP) — A record number of 178 Canadian-bred three-year-old thoroughbreds remain eligible for the 121st running of the Queen's Plate, North America's oldest continuously run stakes race.

English side starts with flourish

LONDON (Reuter) — England, which last won the title outright 17 years ago, started the 1900 five-nation Rugby Union championship with a flourish at Twickenham Saturday, routing Ireland 24-9.

On a grey, cheerless afternoon, England dominated possession to win by three goals and two penalties to three penalties after leading 15-9 at halftime.

England fullback Dusty Hare landed all but one of his attempts at goal to finish with 12 points. Steve Smith, Mike Slemen and John Scott scored the England tries.

At Cardiff, Wales easily overcame a disappointing French challenge to its Five Nations supremacy, soundly beating the French team 18-9 and extending its unbeaten run in the championship to 23 games.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
4 ♡	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	Pass	Dble

Opening lead — ace of spades.

This deal occurred in the 1932 national pair championship. The hand itself was not extraordinary, but the atmosphere in which it was played lends spice to the story.

East-West had already played half the afternoon session when they encountered this deal. During that time they had accomplished the unenviable feat of losing no fewer than seven aces during the play (mostly on defense).

They were naturally disconsolate by the time they came to play this hand. North-South got to six hearts in jig style, mostly due to North's overoptimistic five heart bid. (It was back in the days before Blackwood came into vogue.)

Trying desperately to recover some points for his side, East doubled. His two aces looked colossal to him. West, on lead, promptly plunked down the ace of spades, announcing jubilantly: "Well, here's one ace we won't lose."

West was mistaken. South trumped the ace and proceeded to make the slam. He led a heart to the eight, discarded a club on the king of spades, then led the king of clubs and ruffed East's ace.

Warming to his task, declarer crossed to dummy with another trump, cashed all five of dummy's remaining clubs — which luckily were divided 3-3 — and discarded all five of his diamonds on them. As a result, he wound up making the doubled contract with an overtrick!

Of course, had West led any suit but a spade, South would have gone down one and West's words would not have achieved immortality. As it was, though, East-West, who had started the deal having had seven of their aces put to sleep, finished the hand with three more aces to add to their collection.

"What did you get?" Doug asked, when his sisters came in. "Candies?"

"Sure." Linda emptied a paper bag on to the table. "I'm taking a third of them, and then two more," she told him. "You may have some if you're lucky."

Chris nodded. "That's right," she said, taking half of what remained and then two more candies. "You didn't pay but you can have what's left."

Thanks for idea to Ann Casey, Oshawa, Ontario.

Larry Taylor, a Mississauga councillor, has denied having his dentures shipped from New Orleans to Mississauga at the taxpayers' expense. Resident Valentine Cato told city council that Taylor forgot his teeth at a parks and recreation convention in New Orleans and that he left the convention two days early. Taylor said he left the conference early because he was ill and had returned his unused expense money. He said the controversial ivories were left behind in a hotel room, but a fellow councillor brought them back at no charge to the city.

It will be a long time before the Bow Men's Club in New Hampshire forgets Lillian Carter. It was during an appearance at the club late last year that the president's mother said of Iranian revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini: "If I had a million dollars to spare, I'd hire someone to kill him." Club president Henry Malay says hundreds of letters have been coming in since the statement.

Miss Lillian

Meanwhile, Minneapolis multimillionaire Percy Ross has vowed to give $50 million Khomeini — ransom, for the hostages. The 63-year-old Ross says he's raised the cash from his own coffers and from friends. He's sent a telegram to Khomeini offering the payoff.

Simon Spies runs the biggest charter holiday firm in Sweden and has a $39 million contract with Scandinavian Airlines System. So why, he wanted to know, should Archibald be told to ride in the baggage compartment? Because, said the SAS flight captain in Stockholm, Archibald is a dog. "Discrimination!" yelped Spies — insisting his pampered pet must ride with him in first class. The squabble became so heated police were called — but the captain finally relented when Spies pointed out Archibald's name was written on his ticket. So Archibald flew first class.

City officials in Hamtramck, Mich., don't expect it will start a trend, but Police Chief John Sitek's $500 donation to city coffers was called "a hell of a gesture" all the same. Sitek mailed the cheque out of what he called "concern for our community." The town lost its largest taxpayer when Chrysler Corp. closed its assembly plant earlier this month.

Dear Abby:

On what holiday do the nation's florists do the biggest business? I say that the biggest day is Mother's Day. My husband says it's Valentine's Day. Also, is more money spent on flowers for funerals or weddings?

The Battling Brighams

Dear Brighams:

No orchids to me. I asked the Florists Transworld Delivery, and they listed the holidays in order of sales reported by the nation's florists:

Christmas.
Mother's Day.
Easter.
Valentine's Day.
Thanksgiving.

As for weddings versus funerals, funerals represent approximately 40 per cent of an average florist's business, while weddings represent only 10 per cent.

Dear Abby:

My sister is 46, divorced and a part-time swinger. I don't know what the definition of an alcoholic is, but I think she's one. When she's sober, she's a perfect lady, but after a few drinks she will go to bed with any guy who looks at her.

Sis recently met a fine gentleman who seemed very much interested in her, but he was turned off fast when after a few drinks she said, "If I ever marry again, my husband will have to let me have men friends once in a while because I need variety!" Well, Abby, what respectable man would want a wife like that?

Concerned Brother

Dear Brother:

Alcohol relaxes (and sometimes removes) inhibitions, so it would seem that your sister's promiscuity is brought on by her drinking.

Her "need for variety" can be cured only if she is strongly motivated to cure it. Work on one problem at a time. Keep her sober first.

Dear Abby:

Parents, when you buy gifts for your married son or daughter, don't spend more on your son or daughter than you spend on his or her spouse. Example:

Christmas gifts for son: Cashmere sweater, tennis racquet, brief case, wrist watch.

And please don't give your married child a personal gift on his birthday, and give his spouse something "for the two of you." (Save the gifts "for the two of you" for their anniversary.)

I realize most parents are naturally inclined to be a little more generous to their own flesh and blood, but please don't be so obvious. It's tacky.

Me

On Saturday morning we wash our cars

When I was 14 years old, I bundled my first short story up in hope and a brown envelope and shipped it off to The Toronto Star Weekly, then one of Canada's top fiction outlets. The Star not only accepted my tale: the editor actually sent me a cheque for $35 in payment.

Life hadn't yet taught me the unwisdom of shooting my face off about strokes of fortune if I would avoid unwelcome attention. I was pleased with my success. I talked. And presently I was called down to the principal's office.

Naively, I assumed that His Nibs meant to congratulate me. But this was not his intention.

Was it true, he wanted to know, that I had received a . . . er . . . a sum of money from an . . . umm . . . publication for a piece of writing?

Yessir! I told him proudly.

The principal then opened my dossier and my last report card, which were lying handy on his desk.

My grades, he pointed out, were indifferent. In fact, I would be lucky if I squeaked through my school year. In consequence, I was to indulge in no more of these rash, ill-timed and presumptuous attempts at publication.

He then leaned toward me across his desk with a pussycat smile and uttered words that are still graven on my heart.

"Mayse," he said, "you are trying to run before you have learned to walk."

I know, now, what the true nature of my offence was, although at the time I was grievously puzzled by the principal's reaction.

I had done something out of the norm. I had deviated from the conventional pattern, than which in the eyes of the strait-laced and inflexible, there can be no greater sin.

This streak of tyranny that strains the human spirit shows itself in many and often devious ways.

There is the new tyranny of the non-smoker over the smoker, which expresses itself in various snide little ploys.

There are the anti-this's and the anti-that's, creeping out of the woodwork to inflict their arbitrary views on their fellows.

Admittedly, there are areas in which conformity is not merely a virtue but a necessity. Take the traffic patterns of an airport approach, for instance, or of a busy highway. Here, he who deviates is lost.

But rigidity of thinking, and the intolerance which it breeds, is one of the afflictions of our cut-and-dried, pre-fabricated and neatly-packaged world.

If you are a biddable person, you can count on being told what to wear, what to eat, what to read, and how to vote. And if biddable you are, no bother: you will find these amiable compulsions comfortable.

If you're not, you are required to live in a state of wariness, because sure as shooting, there's someone in your life who won't be happy until you have fallen into step with the regiment.

Among our friends are two spry though aged trouts who live their lives with verve and zest. They have their own house, which they love. They hobnob with neighbourhood friends, they go on trips. They enjoy themselves: they brighten the corner where they are.

Unfortunately, they are cursed with dullard children who lack their parents' git-up-and-go. Determinedly, grimly and persistently, this son and that daughter strive to persuade their parents out of their home and into an apartment.

Their reasoning, the product of poker-stiff and utterly conventional minds, runs like this. 'Mom and Dad are in their late seventies. That's too old to be keeping a house. They should be someplace where nothing's required of them.'

Rigid-mindedness . . . the inability to cope with the new and strange . . . is by no means confined to adults. Some of the awfullest little prigs in my experience have been children.

Once we lived on a Toronto street where, as if on a signal, all the men piled out on a Saturday morning to wash their cars. To that extent, I confirmed. For the job, I wore a ratty old Cowichan sweater, which was comfortable, and reminded me of a Coast that I longed for.

A neighbor's boy hung around watching me busy myself with sponge and chamois. Finally he piped up.

By their signs ye shall know them. Anytime anyone says to you, 'It shouldn't be allowed,' or, 'There ought to be a law,' take warning. And be double-warned if you find those words on your own lips!

ONE YEAR AGO Edward Schreyer was installed as Canada's governor general. Here is a photograph of he and his wife, Lily, taken by an Ottawa photographer for a presentation to U.S. president Jimmy Carter that never took place. It is now Schreyer's official portrait. For a fascinating profile of the office, and the people who have filled it, see Elizabeth Forbes' column today on page 23.

Yugoslav life hard for elderly

By BARNEY PETROVIC

Indifferently, the youngsters look out of the windows or chat with one another. Seldom does one of them get up to offer his or her place to the old folk, swaying uncertaintly between the seats.

"We tend to forget this generation of old people who carried the burden of the war and building things up again."

Newspapers have carried pages of arguments about what to do with old and sick parents when the vacation season comes for their relatively affluent children.

Readers have stated in letters to the editor that old and incapacitated parents should be taken into hospitals so as not to burden their children.

Only a few readers suggested that it was possible to spend vacations while still taking care of the old and infirm.

Many doctors say there is little room in the country's overcrowded hospitals even for the young, let alone the old. They call for the opening of more nursing homes, but this solution is complicated by lack of funds.

Thus, old people often are left to fend for themselves. Newspapers report cases such as that of an old woman whose body was discovered in her Belgrade apartment a month after she had died.

The influential and officially inspired magazine Win asked: What is the purpose of trying to lengthen life if old people are treated in an inhuman way?

"The old people are now the poorest, the least educated and the most endangered social category in Yugoslavia," it said.

Dr. Miroslav Zivkovic, a sociology expert, carried out a survey into the problem of aged people recently and found that only 17 per cent of those living alone were doing so by choice. Others said their children did not want them at home and there was no place for them elsewhere.

Other social surveys say one-third of all people older than 60 cannot walk in the street without help and one in six cannot even make tea or coffee alone.

Forty per cent of the old people living alone in the cities have no bathrooms and 30 per cent have no toilets in their homes.

The plight of the old is much greater in the countryside where state pensions and free medical treatment seldom apply to private farmers, not integrated into the socialist care scheme.

Hormones play part in heart illness

Dr L.L. COLEMAN

Is it true that women are less likely to develop heart attacks than men? If it is so, what is the explanation for it?

Mr. H.B.

Dear Mr. B.:

A long ongoing study of heart disease, known as the Framingham program, has contributed vital information about heart disease, the understanding of its causes, its prevention and its early treatment.

A large segment of the population of Framingham, Mass., has been under surveillance for many years. At regular intervals, important statistics are revealed. Recently, a report confirmed the fact that women have very definitely lowered incidence of heart attacks and strokes than do men.

It is thought that the hormone balance in females may explain the difference in the frequency of heart attacks. This difference is particularly noted in young women. As women get older, however, the difference is less marked. It is accepted that cigarette smoking plays an important role in vascular disturbances. Since women are smoking so much more now than they did many years ago, it is expected that the frequency of heart attacks in women may be on the increase.

Even though there are biological differences between men and women, the same rules of prevention and good judgment should prevail for both. In both sexes the prevention of heart disease demands that high blood pressure be recognized early and treated effectively. High cholesterol must be controlled. Diabetes, too, must be recognized early and actively treated. Cigarette smoking should be eliminated. Overweight, an important factor in heart disease, must be modified.

Scientists are constantly trying to find the subtle reasons why men seem to be more prone to heart attacks than women.

Dear Doctor:

For years I have used glycerin suppositories. It occurred to me that this could have some bad effects eventually. I find I'm really dependent on them for relief from constipation.

Mr. J.A.E.

Dear Mr. E.:

Glycerin suppositories are probably the least treacherous of all methods for relieving constipation. They can, however, upset the function of the bowel over time. Long-term use of suppositories, enemas and laxatives should be avoided. More bulk and roughage in the diet and, especially, plenty of water each day can usually break the suppository and laxative habit.

Longevity guide: adaptation

the fourth quarter

"Adaptation is the secret formula for a long and happy life," Dr. Bob McClure tells me in another valuable exchange of correspondence with the well-known Canadian and fellow senior.

"If you cannot adapt you are either dead now or about to die" is the way he translated similar philosophy from the Chinese.

Many Canadians will join the ranks of the retired in 1980. Many more are nearing this senior category and Dr. McClure sets out adaptations which you may be called upon to make.

(1) Financial: "My personal prejudice is very strong that in retirement one should not be involved in earning a wage or salary. With necessary adaptation one should live on one's pension and other income — the government payments going only to unfortunates who are in genuine need. I believe it is financially unsound and morally wrong to pay out government funds if recipients can get along without such payments.

"Reducing one's standard of living need not be a disaster. I consider this simply a part of a reasonable adaptation to retirement living — much better than ganging up and howling for increased handouts.

"We in Canada are among the most fortunate seniors in the world. For those truly unfortunate 'payment according to need' should be considered; it may be heresy to suggest this but it works out well in New Zealand, for example."

(2) Social: "There are social adaptations called for because of financial, physical and mental changes. Don't hesitate to give up club memberships or moving in certain social circles if age (or finances) indicate.

"There are satisfying substitutes. Due to physical changes in yourself you may find it adviseable to take up different interests and new hobbies; these activities will bring you into a new circle of friends and keep you flexible mentally."

(3) Physical: "Decreasing athletic abilities due to heart and joint changes should be anticipated. Arthritic conditions, deterioration in vision, memory somewhat less reliable are likely companions as you move along. Plan in advance for these possibilities so that they do not come as a shock.

"When the time comes to turn in the big car on a small one or give up driving all together, it is not the end of the world — if you recognize in advance that such things may become necesary. Walking may be just what you need to keep fit — with public transportation or taxis used when necessary (all much cheaper than the personally-owned automobile)."

(4) Mental: "Here, too, plan and take defensive action. The tendency to retire and sit, letting things go, is mentally dangerous for many. Maintaining close contact with younger people is a good weapon in this fight.

"Reading and discussion groups are wonderful preventatives against mental laziness. New studies and new contacts are available and should be used. As a doctor, it used to make me angry to find that prescribed medicines were not being used. I feel the same about the lack of full use of facilities, particularly those offered to seniors at the taxpayers' expense."

Holbrook's book the perfect gift

By PAT DUFOUR

Office retirement parties are always a little hard to take.

People stand around, many with set smiles on their face, wondering how it's going to feel when it comes their turn for saying goodbye.

The retiring recipient suffers through speeches lauding his or her efforts through the years, anticipating that dreaded moment when it comes his or her time "to say a few words".

For some the change in lifestyle is welcomed. For many it's like cutting the umbilical cord. What to do with an uncharted future?

Every week the Times publishes Leslie Holbrook's column The Best of the Fourth Quarter, containing hints on how senior citizens can savor life to the fullest.

Holbrook, who lives in Ontario, has grasped the secret, passing it on to others. But it's not until you read his new book with the same title, containing all his columns, that the impact is really felt.

Having read it, I suggest it should be a "regular" at every retirement gift party.

One column sounds as if it should have a special appeal in Victoria, which has more than the normal share of the elderly. In it Holbrook describes a program called Linked Skills Exchange which is under way in Ontario.

The program is jointly sponsored by the United Senior Citizens of Ontario and the provincial ministry of community and social services.

It works like this. A group, say a senior citizens club, sets up a centre. A small committee is formed to run the centre, the first step being to catalogue all the skills each of the centre members have.

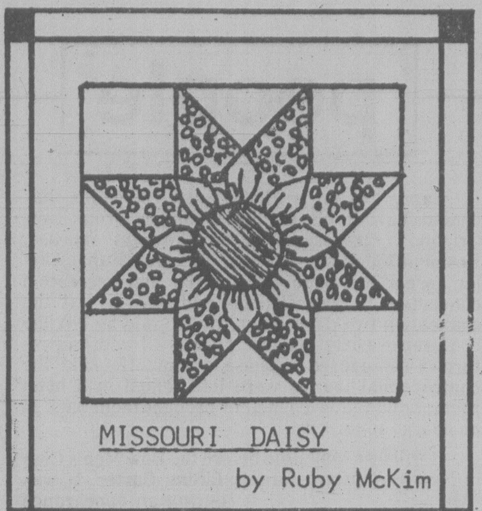
Cards are prepared, each card representing payment for an hour's work. Each member, as an example, could receive cards at the start.

When you need work done, such as fixing a tap or some clothes mended, you phone the centre to see if another member can do the job for you. You pay with exchange cards, the recipient being able to use them for the particular type of help he or she needs.

Sounds like a great idea to me.

The book is full of such good ideas and if you can't find it locally copies can be ordered at $5:95 (shipping charges paid) from the publishers. The address is:- Back Door Press, 123 Woolwich Street, Guelph, Ont., N1H 3V1.

Missouri Daisy is a special beauty



MISSOURI DAISY
by Ruby McKim

Last December while at the Quilt Event of 1979 held in Houston, I visited the booth of Florence Zaentner of Minneapolis (she originally hails from Winnipeg). Among the patterns which she had to display, this particular one impressed me greatly. Why? Because it is fairly simple, and has added dimension in that the little petals of the daisy are shirred, which gives it a delightful, feminine effect. I took a picture of this quilt which Florence had hidden for showing the next day. It was a soft beige and wedgewood blue print, with plain beige petals. A fairly wide sashwork border was used arounf each block, again in the blue print. The quilting stitch design was intricate and beautifully executed. It was clear Florence felt this was a very special quilt. I had to agree. The next day, the quilt was on full display and I enjoyed watching visitors admire its unusual aspects. I was determined to try and find the pattern. Much to my delight, as I thumbed through the latest book from the McKim Studios, there it was, entitled "Missouri Daisy."

What or who is McKim Studios? To quilt pattern collectors, Ruby McKim is a household word. Her volume, 101 Patchwork Patterns is one of the sources that belongs on every quilter's shelf. Ruby died in 1976 at the age of 85, but her work in patchwork and quilting design and recording is being carried on by members of her family. Her daughter, Kim, who wrote the preface to Designs Worth Doing, in which Missouri Daisy appears, relates the history of Ruby and her husband. They collaborated in both design and writing projects which went beyond the field of patchwork and quilting. Their family business "Kimport Dolls," gave the children of this remarkable couple an opportunity to learn not only about warm family life, but also gave them an insight into the effect one woman's designs had on her own, and succeeding generations.

The preface to the book contains little-known facts about Ruby. Ruby graduated from the Parsons School of Fine Arts in New York. She was the Director of Art Education for the Kansas City, Missouri School System, the Art Needlework Editor of Better Homes and Gardens magazine, in addition to being the Editor of Doll Talk magazine for over 35 years. As you can see, she was a very talented person. This latest publication, Designs Worth Doing, contains all sorts of tips and methods for piecing and quilting, as well as preparations and executions of the designs. A highlight is Ruby's original Three Little Pigs quilt which has different designs for many different blocks within the same quilt.

Lynn McKim and Phyllis Tittle, the co-authors of Designs Worth Doing, state that this is Book One. In that case, this will be a series well worth collecting. I like the title, and I especially like Missouri Daisy. In all, it contains 48 patterns collected from Ruby's scrapbook. They are presented for our enjoyment. Perhaps you know a quilter you'd like to share this collection with.

Patterns, etc. available: Designs Worth Doing, a collection of patterns, historical background and basic patchwork and quilting techniques from Ruby McKim's Scrapbook, by Lynn McKim and Phyllis Tittle. (Soft-cover, 120 pages) $10.75 prepaid.

GTP-29: The Patchwork Pattern Converter — sufficient template plastic, plus graph paper and instructions for enlarging and reducing patterns to make any pattern in see-through plastic form. Full instructions included. $3.00.

How to order: Send your name, address and postal code, along with a cheque or money order to: Hearthside Patterns, c/o The Victoria Times, P.O. Box 9120, Station E, Edmonton, Alta. T5P 4K2.

He likes catering to tastebuds

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Teofilo Rovillos would rather sell duck eggs and fresh crab than sit behind a drafting table all day. That's why he gave up his job as civil engineer and opened the Oriental Food Market. His new enterprise caters to the culinary needs of the Filipinos, Chinese, Vietnamese and East Indians. The counters are stocked with things not found in regular food stores.

Take it easy on exercise

If you're 60 or older and making ambitious physical fitness resolutions for a prolonged and healthy life in the '80s, pursue your new regime conservatively and with guidance.

An exercise physiologist from Philadelphia's Temple University says scores of elderly citizens are caught up in the physical fitness kick and are exercising strenuously without knowing their body's capabilities.

"We don't know how far we can push the elderly," says Dr. Zeb Kendrick.

"We're not learning about the body as it is winding down and with all the hype about health and recreation, the older population is being swept along with the craze.

"The introduction of strenuous exercise without an understanding of 'normal' age-associated limits may prove to be detrimental, even life threatening, to portions of North America's geriatic population," warns Kendrick in a press release to The Times.

There's a new age of people concerned with health and diet and the elderly are no exception. He said: "We live in a society where the kids are watching TV and the adults are out jogging.

"The increased stress in our lives has contributed to this reliance on exercise. Everybody thinks a jog around the block is the answer to his or her health problem," he says.

Kendrick explains there have been no criteria set for the elderly. The only tidbit of health education being passed on is the idea that if you feel good physically you can set out on some type of moderate exercise program.

However, he does give this specific rule of thumb: "If you get to the point where you can't carry on a conversation because you're out of breath, it's time to stop. Never tax yourself."

The elderly's dependence on drugs also complicates their health when it comes to exercise.

In order to study these important health issues, Dr. Kendrick is planning a new physical education course to be offered at Temple this summer, Exercise During Aging.

The course will study age-related changes in organs and body systems and how exercise is applied to influence an organ system.

"I'm really concerned about the elderly just carrying on with their normal daily routine and using exercise, in the form of walking or swimming, for example, to make them feel more like taking on those daily chores.

"I'm concerned with the elderly getting out of bed and going down three flights of stairs without any extra stress on their systems.

"They should be able to go shopping or take a walk or have the chance to get out of their homes and live a full healthy life," he says.

"I want to increase the ability of senior citizens to do things and not put themselves in a precarious position by starting out on an exercise regime that is too much for them to handle," he explained.

Schreyer tops distinguished list

Representing the Queen

BYNG

MICHENER

VANIER

MASSEY

. . . first Canadian

One year ago, on January 22, 1979, Richard Edward Schreyer was installed as Canada's twenty-second governor-general since Confederation and, with his wife Lily and their young family, took up residence in Rideau Hall, Ottawa's Government House.

Highlights on his crowded calendar since then show he officially opened a federal Parliament in Ottawa; travelled from coast to coast; acted as host to royalty and to heads of state; bestowed honors on distinguished citizens and led the way at the first blood donor clinic ever held in Rideau Hall.

He has also seen two federal governments defeated, a country-wide election and is now awaiting results of another one, slated for mid-February.

Since Confederation in 1867 there have been a number of changes in the role of the governor-general to better reflect the evolving times and the needs of Canada as a nation.

Our first Governor-General Viscount Monck (1867-1868) played an important part in forming the coalition government which prepared the way for Confederation.

It was he who also declared that the British North America Act was to be our Constitution.

Governor-General the Earl of Dufferin (1872-1878) travelled extensively to promote Canadian unity.

At the same time, a few of his personal decisions raised government ire and resulted in some of the changes that have taken place.

Canada was in an economic depression at the start of his tenure and the Macdonald government was accused by having awarded the CPR contract in return for political contributions (the Pacific Scandal).

Shortly afterward British Columbia became angry with the slow pace of railway construction and threatened to secede from Confederation.

When this occurred Dufferin personally assumed authority and referred the matter to the colonial secretary in London, England.

That interference infuriated the Canadian government and, after a stormy session with the prime minister in Ottawa, Dufferin withdrew from personal involvement in the affairs of government.

On another occasion he exercised his prerogative of clemency and commuted the death sentence of Louis Riel's adjutant-general Lepine.

Again the government protested and London modified the judicial and executive functions of the governor-general.

Our ninth governor-general, Earl Grey (1904-1911) began a movement for the preservation of the Plains of Abraham; promoted the restoration of Louisbourg; the establishment of juvenile courts; called for civil service reform; lead a campaign against tuberculosis and urged the introduction of reindeer into Labrador.

It was due to his efforts that the National Gallery of Canada embarked on the formation of its collection.

His best legacy to sports is the Grey Cup, a symbol of championship in Canadian football.

In the half century immediately after Confederation, the British government had sole responsibility for nominating the governor-general.

However, in that time it had slowly become customary to consult our prime minister.

This was not done with the appointment of the Duke of Devonshire in 1916.

The years 1921-1926, under Lord Byng of Vimy, marked yet another turning point in the evolution of the governor-general's office.

It centred around the defeat of Mackenzie King and his Liberal government and Byng's decision to call on Conservative Leader Arthur Meighen to form a government, instead of dissolving Parliament.

In turn Meighen was defeated, the Liberals won the ensuing election and quickly made their concern known regarding Byng's decision.

This resulted in a new definition of the governor-general as a representative of the Sovereign and not of the British government.

And while his particular interests were in the development of the arts, preservation of our environment, education and individual development, he also viewed his appointment as a special opportunity to make it clear the Crown belonged to Canadians as much as it belonged to Britons.

He spread that message from sea to sea.

First Canadian of French descent to hold office was Georges-Philias Vanier (1959-1967).

He frequently spoke about bilingualism and Canada's two official language groups and he constantly stressed the need for unity and understanding between both as essential to the development of a powerful nation.

In the hundredth year of Confederation, Roland Michener, who had been Speaker of the House of Commons in the Diefenbaker government, was named governor-general.

It was in his term that the Order of Canada was introduced and, a few years later, the Order of Military Merit.

Thus, for the first time, Canada had a system of honors with the governor-general as chancellor and the Queen of Canada as sovereign.

The twenty-first governor-general was Jules Leger. Although hindered by poor health, with the able assistance of Madame Leger, he continued to carry out his duties with a strong devotion to Canada and its people.

Schreyer is the first from Western Canada and the first who is neither of British nor French descent. His roots are rural Manitoba and his ancestry, German and Austrian.

He is proficient in several languages — English, French, Polish, German and Ukranian. He is a strong federalist and a staunch Canadian.

And in one year he has proved to be a vigorous and hard-working governor-general.

Postscript: Basic facts for this column have been taken from a special report on Canada's governors-general, prepared by the minister of state, fitness and amateur sport (Iona Campagnolo) shortly before the Liberal government was defeated last year.

Astronomers have divided the stars into 88 groups or constellations. The purpose of these man-made divisions is to enable easy description of the location of the various stars. From southern Canada there are many constellations that can never be seen. These stars are known as southern circumpolar or northern circumpolar, depending upon whether they are suspended below the southern or northern horizon. To aid astronomers in locating stars and determining their relative positions, maps of the sky have been constructed.

If you would like more information on these maps and the constellations themselves, write to the National Museum of Science and Technology, 1867 St. Laurent Blvd., Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0M8.

Sliced onions can add zip to many meals and dishes. If you would like to enjoy the benefits of onions without the crying that peeling and chopping induces, then dehydrated onions could be the solution.

Before using dehydrated onions in any recipe, you should soak them in water for 30 minutes. When you are substituting for fresh onions, try one tablespoon per ¼ cup of fresh onions.

Courses offered to women

The course — Shifting Gears for the Middle Years — is sponsored by Camosun College.

Prime Time, an organization established to help middle-aged women, will provide bursaries for anyone unable to pay the $20 tuition fee.

"The course is, for many women, the first step out of their home after years of housework and motherhood," said Beryl Young of Prime Time.

Young said many women in their middle years come to the point where their children are gone, their homemaking chores have decreased or become boring and they want to do something more with their life.

Courses will be held in the Gordon Head Community Centre and the Esquimalt Recreation Centre.

To register, call Camosun College at 592-1281 and for more information about the course or a bursary call Young at Prime Time, 388-6101.

No threat to Ardmore firs

Fir engraver beetles are not seriously damaging Grand Fir Trees in North Saanich's Ardmore district, it has been learned.

A check of the trees by the Canadian Forestry Service indicates that the beetle, while present, doesn't present a danger at this time, says Peter Koot, of the Pacific Forest Research Centre.

Koot said the check showed some firs in the area have died as a result of an attack by the beetle combined with the high water table of the Ardmore area but not enough to require preventative action.

"I don't think there is much of a problem there. We found no new attacks, only trees that had been attacked previously," Koot said.

The check was undertaken at the request of North Saanich council after it was suggested as many as 100 trees were infested and might have to be removed by the municipality.

Trees in Deep Cove and Lands End Road areas will also be checked for possible infestation.

Dean Sawyer gets post

'Worst mass murder' five years ago

By MARK DALY

MONTREAL (CP) — It was the stuff of nightmares. Firemen arrived at the Bar-Salon Gargantua on a subzero early morning, five years ago today, thinking they were answering a routine alarm — until they moved back a melted juke-box blocking the door to a padlocked cupboard.

Inside, with faces twisted in masks of fright, were the bodies of 13 people, victims of what police called the worst premeditated mass murder in Montreal's history.

In the jargon of city police, it was a "settling of accounts" among fellow criminals. But it was like no other settlement before or since in Montreal's "petite pegre," the term for the seamy, small-time underworld.

The Gargantua mass murder by no means signalled the end of such account-settling. But the men called "punks" by police — to distinguish them from better-organized racketeers — seem more restrained these days, if only slightly.

Just after midnight the morning of Jan. 21, 1975, there were 11 patrons in the Gargantua, a bar in Montreal's tough, working-class north end. They were having a couple of drinks, swapping stories and half-heartedly checking out the topless dancers.

Among them were a taxi driver, married and father of four children, just off his night shift; an unemployed laborer celebrating his win at the horse races; some local toughs and their lady friends. The club manager and his wife were tending bar.

By 1 a.m. all were dead.

Two men strode into the club, shot manager Rejean Fortin to death and wounded customer Pierre Lamarche, then locked everybody into a beer storage closet and set fire to the establishment.

When firemen moved the juke-box and opened the closet, the bodies were heaped on top of one another amid a jumble of beer cases. All but Fortin had died of asphyxiation. Lamarche had been shot in the stomach, perhaps when he refused to enter the tiny room, but did not die of the wound.

Later that morning, police started looking for Richard "The Weasel" Blass, a notoriously violent local hood who earned his nickname staging spectacular jailbreaks and surviving at least four underworld attempts on his life. He was then at large following his most recent escape.

It was speculated — but never proved in court — that Fortin was shot because he had witnessed the slaying of two Blass associates three months earlier at the Gargantua, and that the 12 others were killed because they were unlucky enough to be on the scene

Blass was implicated by police in that earler double slaying, as was Edgar Roussel, a convicted bank robber and jailbreak artist who had escaped prison with Blass.

Another Blass associate, convicted robber Fernand Beaudet, was eventually charged with 13 counts of murder in the Gargantua mass killing, but was acquitted for lack of evidence. He remains in prison serving time for other crimes Roussel was eventually convicted for the double slayings, but was not implicated in the later 13.

Three days after the 13 Gargantua slayings, police tracked Blass to a winter chalet in the Laurentian mountains north of the city.

Blass was cut down by machine gun fire after two dozen police officers burst into the cottage. Police later said he had reached for a gun instead of surrendering.

Russians running out of oil?

HALIFAX (CP) — External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald says the Soviet Union is running short of oil and recent events in Afghanistan indicate it may be after mid-East supplies

She told the annual meeting of the Nova Scotia Progressive Conservative party Saturday that Canada must become self sufficient in energy because of the uncertain international markets.

"The Warsaw Pact countries have been told that they can no longer rely on Russia for their supplies because the Soviet Union, too, is running short of oil," she said.

She wondered what would happen to oil prices if Hungary, Czechoslovakia and East Germany join the competition to buy oil on the international market.

Recent activities by the USSR indicate it's not impossible that the USSR itself may come ino the market.

New course for Boston Pops

LONDON (UPI) — "Star Wars" composer John Williams, newly appointed conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra, says he will update the Arthur Fiedler tradition by seeking out "wildly talented" new composers and rescuing neglected modern works.

Williams paid tribute to the late conductor, but said he will not follow blindly in his footsteps.

The 47-year-old composer, who won three Oscars for his stirring scores for "Star Wars" and two other films, told a news conference of his eagerness to innovate and experiment.

He said he knew he would be compared to Fiedler — "an unmatchable myth".

Solos highlight Victoria symphony

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Many solo passages throughout the current Victoria Symphony program testify to the quality of musicianship now present within the orchestra. Topping off the impression is the solo spot appearance of two principals, concert master Derry Deane and cellist Larry Skaggs, performing the demanding and sumptuous "Double" Concerto in C minor Op.102 by Brahms.

Substantial technical mastery and profound musical insight in a matched degree are essential to a satisfactory performance of this major work. Deane and Skaggs, who perform fairly frequently as a duo, have achieved a good balance and rapport which generally served them well on Sunday.

With Paul Freeman conducting, the orchestra played a thoroughly competent role, providing substantial support. In fact, the support was occasionally somewhat too substantial for the penetrating capacity of the solo instruments, but this was by no means the over-all impression.

Inspiration was somewhat lacking in the first movement despite good entrances by the two solo instruments and many efficiently done passages from both soloists and orchestra. It was not until the second movement, the Andante, that the music began to soar and despite a momentary lapse when the duo was less than firmly knit, there was considerable beauty and lyrical feeling in the rendering of this section. It was followed by a spirited and enchanting finale with Skaggs rising fully to the emphasis on the cello part and Freeman leading the orchestra into a vibrant and technically assured performance.

The program opens with Murray Adaskin's three-part Suite for Orchestra, written in 1948. The interpretation by Freeman, and the orchestra's execution, acknowledges and highlights Adaskin's astute and empathetic writing for all sections of the orchestra.

There are charming lyrical episodes; the invention always respects the character and quality of the instruments while exploring and extending their scope and harmonic possibilities. Adaskin uses many interesting rhythmic patterns and contrasts of tonal color. The composer, a Victoria resident for some time, was present.

The final work on the program brought Freeman and the orchestra a prolonged and deserved ovation. The interpretation of Tchaikovsky's Symphony No.2 in C minor is a shining example of what the Victoria Symphony is now capable of providing.

Termed the Little Russian, it is stirring, colorful and frequently enchanting with its considerable delving into folk music of the Ukraine. Freeman invokes a disciplined, clearly defined but far from stilted performance from the orchestra; in fact, the range of dynamics and the immediacy of spirit and fervor in the playing has seldom, if ever, been excelled.

Everything is maintained well in balance, with excellent percussion, clear but not overbearing brass, precision in the string playing and notable wind quality.

The latter section is much exposed throughout the program and meets the challenge well, especially when solo passages appear such as for the horn and bassoon in the Tchaikovsky.

NFB appoints new English unit director

MONTREAL (CP) — Peter Katadotis has been appointed director of the National Film Board's English-language production unit, government film commissioner James de B. Domville has announced.

Born in Sherbrooke, Que., Katadotis, 43, has a master's degree in social work and has been involved in community and urban development projects for several years. He joined the film board in 1976 as an executive producer.

He replaces Ian McLaren, who has joined the Secretary of State department in Ottawa.

Notice of Public Announcement dated 8 January, 1980

EXTENSION OF SERVICE TO NORTHERN AND REMOTE COMMUNITIES: ESTABLISHMENT OF A COMMITTEE AND NOTICE OF PUBLIC MEETINGS

The Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission announced the formation of a committee which will issue a report on how the number and variety of television services to northern and remote communities in Canada might best and most expeditiously be increased. It is envisaged that the Committee's report, which is expected by 15 May, 1980, will also deal with issues related to satellite distribution of programs and pay-television, since these issues are likely to arise in the context of the proceeding.

The Committee, to be chaired by Commissioner Real Therrien, will include Commissioners Edythe Goodridge, Rosalie Gower, Paul Klingle and Gilles Soucy, and Messrs. John Amagoalik, David Hobbs, Charles Feaver, and Allan Warrack.

The committee will receive proposals for service, as well as briefs and comments from the public. The deadline for such submissions will be 18 February, 1980. The Committee will conduct a public meeting in the National Capital Region commencing 25 March, 1980 to discuss such proposals for service as may have been submitted, as well as their implications for remote communities and for the Canadian broadcasting system. It is expected that the Committee will hold additional public meetings in one or more other locations in Canada, particularly in the North, in response to briefs and comments submitted. The public meetings of the committee are also expected to discuss the mstters raised in a letter from the Minister of Communications to the commission of 22 November, 1979 as well as the suggested objectives and guidelines prepared by federal and provincial officials attached to that letter. (A copy of this letter, which was publicly released on 29 November, 1979, is available from CRTC Information Services, CRTC, Ottawa, Ontario, K1A 0N2).

Following the committee's report, the Commission will decide upon a call for specific licence applications. This could involve pay-television (either as part of a "package" or separately) provided the commission is satisfied that pay-television can make a significant and positive contribution to broadcasting in Canada and can make effective use of Canadian resources.

Complete texts of this document are published in the "Canada Gazette", Part I, which is generally available for viewing in reference libraries; single copies are sold at bookstores carrying Canadian government publications.

Public interest groups are invited to contact the CRTC for copies of CRTC public documents.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

King Alfonso XIII 'home' for burial

EL ESCORIAL, Spain (UPI) — Amid shouts of "Long live the King!," the body of King Alfonso XIII, last Spanish monarch before the Republic, returned home Saturday for burial with his ancestors 39 years after his death in exile.

Thousands of Spaniards crowded the hilltop town of El Escorial, 30 miles north of Madrid, to cheer Alfonso, his son, Don Juan de Borbon and his grandson, reigning King Juan Carlos.

Alfonso, who endorsed the military dictatorship of Miguel Primo de Rivera in 1923, abdicated in 1931 — one year after the dictator's downfall — amid violent criticism of his role in Spanish politics.

He died in a Rome hotel 10 years later, refused a Spanish burial by the Franco regime.

Azcarate said Saturday he introduced a motion for the return of the bodies of Alfonso and two Republican presidents, Niceto Alcala Zamora and Manuel Azana, "to end a sad period of violence and incompatibility in Spanish history."

Two dead in Okla. race clash

An auxiliary policeman and an unidentified black man were killed in the rioting that broke out after a black youth was beaten to death near a predominantly white night club, officials said.

The body of the second black man, believed to be in his 20s, was found early today in tall weeds behind a service station that had been vandalized by the mob Sunday night. The cause of death was not disclosed.

While police patrolled the mostly-quiet streets today, officials said the discovery of the black man's body increased tensions in the black neighborhoods and some

McCartney languishes in jail, Wings take flight

The Tokyo district prosecutor's office said no decision had been reached on whether to file drug charges against McCartney or deport him for trying to smuggle marijuana into Japan.

Harvey Goldsmith, manager of the Wings rock group, said the singer's Japanese lawyer, Tasuku Matsuo, went to the Tokyo detention center with vegetarian food but was turned away.

Several hundred rock fans gathered outside the Budokan Martial Arts Hall where McCartney and Wings had been scheduled to begin their 11 concert tour of Japan today.

McCartney reportedly has offered to reimburse Japanese promoters for their losses on the canceled tour, totaling about $1 million.

Takahiro Kawaguchi, vice president of the 4,000-member "Complete Beatles Fan Club," said his organization was soliciting members to sign a petition to be sent to McCartney to show their solidarity with him.

"I still can't believe it," said Rika Aoyama, an 18-year-old high school student when asked about McCartney's arrest Wednesday evening at Tokyo International airport.

A new zucchini

At last a couple of seed catalogues have come my way making it possible to spend time wishing I could grow everything of interest. Instead, the usual ambitious list will be made and then whittled down to something just above the "possible" line.

This idea may be worth passing on to others. Don't be limited to what you know can be handled without effort — its more fun to aim at a point above that; the extra effort of achievement is more exciting.

A new Summer Squash of the Zucchini type makes its entry this year after its continent-wide tests last year earned it an All-America Selection Bronze Medal. The newcomer's name is Gold Rush.

You guessed it. The new Zucchini hybrid is listed as a "highly visible golden fruit". The taste and texture is like the green Zucchini that we all have been crazy about for the last 20 years, and Gold Rush can, like the others also be eaten raw in salads. This way not only the full flavor is enjoyed but every mineral in the fruits is available.

An advantage mentioned in pre-season advertising is the compact growth and apparently less foliage for "sun and wind can reach and dry the soil at the base of plants and reduce rotting from damp soil."

In our normally dry summers this would be a disadvantage, so that we shall need abundant moisture-holding compost in the planting holes or we shall never harvest a big crop of tender squash.

Another new squash, this one introducedlast season I believe, is Sweet Mama, a winter keeper even in the smaller sizes than are listed in catalogues as being possible. An excellent sweet flavor, the deep orange flesh resembles as much older favorite, Buttercup, which is similar to Sweet Mama in shape.

A squash that I have never thought of as being listed for winter keeping is Vegetable Spaghetti. Not only is this a conversation piece at the table, but the delicate flavor is delicious.

The contrasting texture and flavor goes well with other elusive flavors among vegetables on the same plate. And appetizing color combinations are possible too, using a mass of the spaghetti-like strands with more positive colors of tomato red, and pea green.

Spaghetti Squash has been around in Canadian catalogues for at least 20 years and grown locally too. It is listed as producing first fruits about 70 days after transplanting to the garden. This means the seeds should be sown between April 27 and May 7 in small separate containers to get a start indoors and then gradually hardened off in a coldframe, covered at night, open on mild days.

In the colder parts of Greater Victoria, we rarely can plant out either tomatoes, peppers or squash until the last week of May or even the first week of June, but with well started young healthy plants there is no setback and we pick as early as anyone. It just means a bit more work accommodating the plants indoors, and then moving them out and in during the early stages to keep them compact.

Another ambition for the coming season is to again grow a few sweet peppers by sowing at the same March 20 date as we choose for tomato seeding. The sweet green and sweet red fruits fresh from the plants have the same appeal of goodness as do the vine ripened tomatoes.

Let us be only reasonably realistic in our ambitions for the coming gardening season. Our success will depend on planning, and allowing time out for the unexpected. Achievement of some of our aims will be the excitement and reward.

Iowa first presidential test

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — In living rooms, church basements and schoolhouses, Iowa Republicans and Democrats meet today to declare their presidential preferences in primary campaigns marked by sharp swings in public opinion polls.

The parties' precinct caucuses are the first official tests of the U.S. presidential campaign and a majority of the 10 Republicans and three Democrats seeking nomination campaigned hard in the state.

But not President Carter, who said the Iranian crisis required him to remain in Washington. Instead, he sent Vice-President Walter Mondale, members of the cabinet, his wife Rosalynn, their children and his mother.

And on Sunday, Carter demonstrated again the ability of a president to capture attention when he appeared on NBC's Meet the Press. He urged a boycott of the Summer Olympics in Moscow and defended the policies pursued during his three years in the White House.

Carter's chief rival for the Democratic nomination, Senator Edward Kennedy, was also on television Sunday.

On ABC's Issues and Answers, he said he would support an Olympics boycott, but called that proposal and the administration's partial embargo of grain sales to the Soviets "symbols" and added: "I don't think symbols are a substitute for an effective foreign policy."

Kennedy said Carter must receive at least 50 per cent of the caucus votes to claim victory — a difficult goal in a state that traditionally elects many uncommitted delegates.

Kennedy found himself in the role of an underdog, a dramatic reversal from the days before he became a candidate and before the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Iran, when the senator led Carter 2 to 1 in most polls.

A poll conducted Jan. 6-9 by the Des Moines Register gave Carter 57 per cent popular support to Kennedy's 25 per cent. Just a month before, each man had drawn a 40-per-cent rating.

On the Republican side, former California governor Ronald Reagan still led in the latest Register poll but had slipped badly from his showing in an earlier one, taken before the televised debate earlier this month in which he declined to participate.

Several other Republican hopefuls predicted former UN ambassador George Bush, who campaigned hard and organized well in Iowa, will finish ahead of Reagan.

Senator Howard Baker of Tennessee told a rally in Des Moines that "I hope you'll turn out in massive numbers; that's the only way Howard Baker is going to do well."

Former governor John Connally of Texas wound up his Iowa campaign on Saturday after a 40-hour marathon stint that demonstrated his stamina and, Connally hoped, provided an obvious reminder that Reagan will be 69 years old next month.

The other active Republican candidate in Iowa was Representative Philip Crane of Illinois.

Fishermen pulled from icy waters

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — A United States Coast Guard search plane found three Seattle men in a life raft Saturday afternoon, four days after they took to frigid Alaska waters when their crab boat sank under the weight of ice.

A spokesman said the coast guard will continue to search for two other Seattle men aboard the crabber Gemini. The survivors were identified as Eric Mills, 20, Mark McKinnon, 20, and Wayne Scheuffely, 23.

The survivors said the Gemini sank and the two other men were unable to make it to the raft. However, the coast guard was regarding the sinking as unconfirmed and continuing the search for Steve Olden, about 27, and Roy O'Hara, about 24, both of Seattle.

Amin guest of Saudis?

LONDON (Reuter) — The Sunday Telegraph says deposed Ugandan leader Idi Amin is living in Saudi Arabia under the protection of King Khaled.

Tanker blockade threatened

An environmental spokesman has warned his group will organize a blockade if super-tankers carrying Alaska crude oil attempt to enter Juan de Fuca Strait under the Northern Tier pipeline proposal approved last week by U.S. President Jimmy Carter.

Greenpeace president Patrick Moore said Sunday a blockade is the only tactic that could stop the tankers which would bring oil from Valdez, Alaska, to Port Angeles, Wash.

Moore said Greenpeace would need help from other organizations, such as native groups and fishermen, in setting up the blockade.

The blockade threat was followed by a statement today from Environment Minister Stephen Rogers that there is virtually nothing B.C. can do to protect its coastline from a major oil spill.

"In terms of our preparations for handling oil spills on the West Coast, I doubt that Environment Canada or the provincial environment ministry has anything like enough capacity to handle it," he said.

"But I doubt anybody has enough capacity to handle the volume of oil we'd be looking at if we had a major disaster."

Meanwhile, Jack Nichol, president of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union, said if oil is shipped along B.C.'c coast, it will prove "the politicians are completely out of whack on this one."

He said the oil should be shipped further south to California, rather than Port Angeles, "but the environmentalists in Santa Barbara won't allow it."

Premier Bill Bennett's discussions on energy matters today with Washington Governor Dixie Lee Ray were expected to touch on the proposed use of Port Angeles as the pipeline terminus.

However, Rogers said, whether tankers offload at Port Angeles or at some point farther out in the strait will make no difference.

"With the speed the tide is moving in and out, whether the thing is located 12 miles further up the strait is not going to make very much difference if we have a major spill," he said.

Early returns show rail unions reject BCR pact

Gold jumps to $850

LONDON (AP) — Gold hit a record $850 U.S. a troy a ounce — $987 Canadian — at the afternoon fixing in London today, after soaring to $845 in Zurich. The Zurich price had matched the record set in European trading Friday.

European bullion dealers said early activity today was confined mainly to inquiries. But these, along with what was described as a continuing "underlying area of good demand," was sufficient to keep prices up.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hopes for an early end to the lengthy strike by British Columbia Railway employees appeared to be dashed today as members of a key union voted in first returns not to go back to work.

There were reports that the union's members in Prince George and North Vancouver, representing about half of the UTU membership, had rejected an end to the month-long work stoppage.

The union is the one which would be affected by a company proposal to eliminate one brakeman from most trains.

Lindley said two other unions in the seven-union Joint Council of Railway Unions, which represents B.C. Rail's 2,200 striking employees, were supporting the UTU's objections to a tentative settlement worked out last week with the help of provincial Labor Minister Jack Heinrich.

Heinrich said from Prince George today that he had expected the railway's operations to begin before the seven unions conducted ratification votes on the proposed settlement. The ratification process was expected to take about a month.

Lindley said he was waiting today for final ballots to come in from northern members of his union.

"It doesn't look like we're going back," he said.

Negotiators for the company and the unions met Sunday to clarify a pay formula in the agreement.

The back-to-work agreement is being presented to workers at the Crown-owned railway without a recommendation by the negotiating committee of the Joint Council of Railway Unions.

Heinrich successfully proposed removing manning from the bargaining table and putting it in an arbitrator's hands, along with related safety matters.

Export gas price hiked

The price paid B.C. and other provinces for exported natural gas will go up 30 per cent to $4.47 U.S. from $3.45 U.S. effective Feb. 1.

The increase, announced today by federal Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn, means an additional annual revenues of $985 million for Canada assuming natural gas exports are maintained at the 1978-79 level.

The annual value of natural gas exports will be about $4.3 billion.

In Victoria, Energy Minister Bob McClelland said he welcomes the increase as a source of revenue to the province.

However, the provincial government has under consieration a seven per cent increase for domestic users.

The hike in the export price came as Washington State Gov. Dixie Lee Ray arrived in Victoria to meet with Premier Bill Bennett to discuss a number of energy-related issues.

TORONTO (CP) — A poll taken by the CTV television network a month before the federal election indicates the Liberals will form the next government.

Fifty-seven per cent of respondents to the poll said the Liberals would win Feb. 18, compared to 23 per cent who thought the Progressive Conservatives would remain in power. Two per cent expected the NDP to form the government.

Nationally, 51 per cent said they would likely vote Liberal — 20 percentage points more than those who thought they would vote for the Conservatives. The Liberal figure was nine points higher, and the Tory figure seven points lower, than the results to the same question in a CTV poll midway through the last federal campaign.

NDP was up two to 16 per cent and other parties were down four to two per cent.

He said the CTV poll confirmed the findings of two Gallup polls, a Carleton University poll and private party polls.

Reacting to the poll, Prime Minister Joe Clark was optimistic.

"I'm always more comfortable running as the underdog," Clark said on an open-line show on CHAN-TV. "That means my workers will get out and work."

Conservative strength will change once Liberal Leader Pierre Trudeau comes out of hiding and faces the issues, Clark said.

Forty-eight per cent of those polled said they thought Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau was most capable of solving the country's problems, compared with 22 per cent who favored Clark.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent was supported by 16 per cent, others had one per cent and 13 per cent said none of the three was capable of resolving Canada's problems.

The poll of 1,000 persons across Canada was conducted by Thompson, Lightstone and Co. Ltd.

Regionally, the Prairies were the biggest surprise. The Liberals were supported by 41 per cent of those polled, a 17-point increase. The gain appeared to be at the expense of the Conservatives who dropped 14 points to 43. NDP remained at 16 per cent.

The largest gain by the Liberals — 26 points to 59 — was registered in the Atlantic provinces The gain appeared to come from former supporters of the NDP, which dropped 15 points to nine. The Tories were down four to 32.

In voter-heavy Ontario, Liberals were up slightly to 43, but the Conservatives dropped 11 points to 35. NDP was up eight to 21 per cent.

The region including British Columbia, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories was the only one in which the Liberals and the Conservatives appeared in a tight race.

The polls were released Sunday, the same day President Carter called on the International Olympic Committee to boycott the Moscow Games or transfer them to another site if the Soviet forces are still in Afghanistan a month from now.

Newsweek said 56 per cent of the 518 people in the survey conducted for the magazine by the Gallup Organization last Wednesday and Thursday feel the U.S. should boycott the Games if they are played in Moscow.

The Washington Star said 86 percent of the 2,666 readers who responded to a questionnaire said they favored a U.S. boycott of the summer Olympics in Moscow.

Thirty-four per cent of the Newsweek poll's respondents feel the United States should participate in the games and the balance said they don't know what course of action Washington should take.

The news magazine said Americans favor moving the Games out of Moscow by a 3-to-1 margin if Soviet troops are not withdrawn from Afghanistan.

Newsweek said that in 1936, 57 per cent of the people contacted in a Gallup poll opposed boycotting the Munich Games to protest the Nazi persecution of Jews.

The Star noted its own poll was not scientific, but said the overwhelming sentiment against Moscow in the questionnaires that had been mailed in showed a definite trend.

In answer to the question "Should the U.S. boycott the Moscow Olympics?" 85.8 per cent said yes while 14.2 percent said no.

Cooper holds answers in his hand

By PAUL MINVIELLE

After almost two decades of working diligently and without fanfare planning for disasters, the uneasy international situation has thrust Fred Cooper back into the public eye.

While the global crisis caused by the Russian invasion of Afghanistan hasn't quite reached the manic proportions of the original Cold War, Cooper, Emergency Planning Canada regional director for B.C., says it's getting there.

His Victoria office has been handling up to a dozen calls a day asking for information on building bomb shelters, and his colleagues across the country are witnessing the same phenomenon.

What prompted the suddenly flurry of interest in fallout and shelters was the Russian invasion of Afghanistan Dec. 27.

"I can't recall when there's been so much interest," says Cooper.

In Toronto, anxious residents have been calling architects and construction companies in the last few weeks for advice on how to build them. Some have even gone ahead and built their own.

In Winnipeg, the Emergency Measures Organization has been mailing out pamphlets dealing with nuclear attack "like they were going out of style."

And in Edmonton, the Emergency Planning Canada office has mailed out more than 2,000 packages of information on nuclear fallout shelters and planning for a nuclear war.

Cooper said in a recent interview he is confident emergency plans will work as long as a nuclear attack doesn't come suddenly.

"Provided it didn't happen in the middle of the night and we have time to get ready, we'll be all right," he said.

While that sounds hilarious at first glance, Cooper hastens to qualify it. The reporter in question just didn't bother to follow through.

The pure and simple fact, says Cooper, is if there is what military planners call a "preemptive strike" — that is, an attack completely without warning — we've had it.

"It doesn't really matter what we do — we're going to get it anyway," he said.

But military planners, Cooper says, insist that there will probably be plenty of warning of a nuclear war and so far nobody appears to believe the Afghanistan crisis has reached the stage where it could trigger a nuclear war.

Cooper also took issue with suggestions that Emergency Planning Canada planners have been sitting in dusty offices awaiting the next threat of nuclear war before inunindating the public with two-decade-old pamphlets on how to build fallout shelters.

That betrays an ignorance of what EPC and its provincial counterpart have been doing, Cooper says.

In peacetime, the two emergency groups have concentrated on emergency plans in the event of such disasters as floods or earthquakes, not war.

As for a dusty, decades-old pamphlet with a foreword by the late John George Diefenbaker, Cooper points out that back in the late Fifties, someone grossly overestimated the number of pamphlets that would be required.

Rather than have them destroyed, EPC kept them and they're now being mailed out again.

"It seemed a waste to reprint them insofar as the information is basically still up-to-date," Cooper said.

As an example of EPC's peacetime role, Cooper points out that he's been involved in assessing recent flood damage in the Lower Mainland.

Federal and provincial aid to disaster victims is based on these assessments.

The EPC office also makes available information on how to cope with disasters like earthquakes and the like.

It recommends that everyone have a two-week emergency supply of food, enough potable drinking water for the same length of time and a portable radio with plenty of batteries.

Without power, you can't cook and you can't run a regular radio or television set to find out what's happening.

If a nuclear attack does come, and if there is at least some warning, EPC does have plans in place.

If necessary, municipal, provincial and federal government officials, as well as some designated industrial experts, will travel to Nanaimo to a large underground bomb shelter in the defence department property bordering Malaspina College.

It was built in Diefenbaker's regime and it's still called the Diefenbunker.

Tito OK after surgery

Yugoslavia's 87-year-old leader was operated on Sunday for the second time in eight days to prevent fatal gangrene poisoning due to blockage in the arteries of the leg.

"The general condition of President Tito is good," his doctors said in a medical bulletin issued today. They said his pulse, blood pressure and temperature were within normal limits.

Belgrade remained calm despite speculation all week that the Russians might try to coerce Yugoslavia back into the Kremlin's orbit if Tito, the pioneer of the independent communism, died. Anti-aircraft guns were set up at the Belgrade and Zagreb airports, but this appeared to be part of a nationwide low-priority "vigilance" program ordered after the Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

In Bonn, the West German defence ministry denied German newspaper reports that the Soviets were reinforcing their forces in Central Europe because of Tito's condition.

"A strengthening of Warsaw pact troops in Central Europe or unusual troop movements cannot currently be observed — also not against Yugoslavia," a spokesman said.

"We are with Tito as always," the newspaper Borba said today. "Tito is with us and in us."

President Carter said he expects the U.S. Olympic Committee will go along with his call for a U.S. boycott.

Carter has no legal authority to dictate a boycott and the U.S. committee will meet next weekend in Colorado Springs, Colo., to consider the president's request.

Carter outlined his proposal Sunday on NBC's Meet the Press. Asked afterward whether he thought the U.S. committee would abide by his request, he said: "I think so."

Under Carter's proposal, the U.S. boycott would take effect if the International Olympic Committee ignores the president's appeal for a global boycott, as seems highly likely.

The committee will meet in Lake Placid, N.Y., in mid-February, just before the Winter Olympics begin in that city.

For now, however, the focus is on the U.S. Olympic Committee, which will attempt to poll about 10,000 prospective U.S. Olympic athletes to help the 86 voting members of the committee's executive board decide on Carter's proposal.

IOC president Lord Killanin rejected Sunday U.S. moves to boycott the Moscow Olympic Games in retaliation for Soviet intervention in Afghanistan.

He said in an interview Sunday in Dublin, Ireland; "There is no question of their (the Games) being moved moved to another venue."

Killanin was quoted as telling The Times of London that the Olympics were awarded to the Soviet Union under an agreement in 1974 and they cannot be shifted unless Moscow violates that accord.

"This does not mean that I or the IOC are condoning the political action taken by the host country, but if we started to make political judgments, it would be the end of the Games or any sport that behaved similarly," he said.

In Vancouver Sunday, Prime Minister Clark said he has not ruled out the possibility of Canada boycotting the Olympic Games in Moscow if Soviet troops do not leave Afghanistan.

His statement slightly toughened his previous stand on the Soviet military action, although he added he does not want to keep Canadian athletes from the Games.

He said his chief aim is, as it has been since the Soviet army crossed the Afghan border, to get the games moved to another site.

He told reporters External Affairs Minister Flora MacDonald will meet Canadian Olympic officials as soon as possible to formally ask them to advocate a change of location when they attend International Olympic Committee (IOC) meetings before the next month's Winter Games in Lake Placid, N.Y.

Clark said he has not proposed moving the Games to Montreal, as suggested by Carter. Montreal officials have said the 1976 Olympic site could not be made ready by this summer.

In Toronto Saturday, Steve Paproski, federal minister of fitness and amateur sports, announced Canada is ending an amateur sports exchange agreement with the Soviet Union because of its invasion of Afghanistan.

Paproski said swimming, diving, judo and gymnastic events will be cancelled and other sporting events will be reviewed as they come up.

Invasion uniting Arabs

Times News Services

Arab envoys in the Middle East were reported on the move today, engaged in intensive diplomatic activity that informed sources in Beirut, Lebanon, said is aimed at forging a common front on the issue of the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan.

The Mideastern Arab states and other countries of the Islamic conference are scheduled to meet in Islamabad, Pakistan, next Saturday to discuss the situation in Afghanistan, where Soviet and Afghan government forces are trying to put down a rebellion by fundamentalist Moslem tribesmen.

Several Islamic states, including Saudi Arabia, have already announced they will boycott the Gummer Olympic Games in Moscow in protest.

Meanwhile, Afghanistan's seven rebellious Moslem factions are reported trying to unite for a holy war against the Soviet occupation army.

"The Afghan revolutionaries' duty is to expel the Soviet forces from Afghanistan through jihad (holy war), not through negotiations," the official said.

Pentagon sources in Washington said the fighting since the Soviet intervention has been fiercest in the northeastern part of Afghanistan, bordering the Soviet Union, Pakistan and China.

Meanwhile, the Soviet-backed government decided this weekend to halt for the moment the issuance of official documents allowing Western journalists to work in the Central Asian country.

The move, which followed the expulsion of all American correspondents from Afghanistan last week, was seen as a possible prelude to orders to all non-Communist reporters to leave the country.

In Tehran, Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, describing the presence of Soviet troops 28 kilometres from the Iran-Afghanistan border as a "serious threat," has promised his country will take decisive action on the matter.

Smokers start young

OTTAWA (UPC) — About half of Canada's schoolchildren try cigarettes before they leave primary school and more than a quarter of high school students are regular smokers, according to a health department survey released Monday.

The survey, released to coincide with the start of national non-smoking week, polled students in grades three to 13 in 409 schools. A total of 105,788 students responded to the questionnaire.

By age 12, one half of elementary school children had tried smoking. By age 14 about 15 percent of boys and 20 percent of girls were daily smokers. By age 17, those figures increased to 27 percent of boys and 30 percent of girls.

"The figures showed some indications that boys who smoke tended to smoke more heavily than girls. In grades three and over, 47 per cent reported having never smoked at all."

The survey showed also students were less likely to become regular smokers than those from families where one or both of their parents smoked.

BOGOTA (AP) — The death toll in the collapse of a crowded wooden grandstand in the northern Colombian city of Sincelejo climbed to 162 today. The Sunday accident at a bull-running event left about 500 spectators injured.

The bleachers, an extension upward of the grandstand at Colombia's largest bullring, were supported by long beams sunk into the ground.

The 260-metre tanker Prince William Sound was bound for Port Angeles, Wash., with 831,000 barrels of Alaska crude oil Thursday when it lost power in its main propulsion system, and drifted for 14 hours raising fears of a major oil spill.

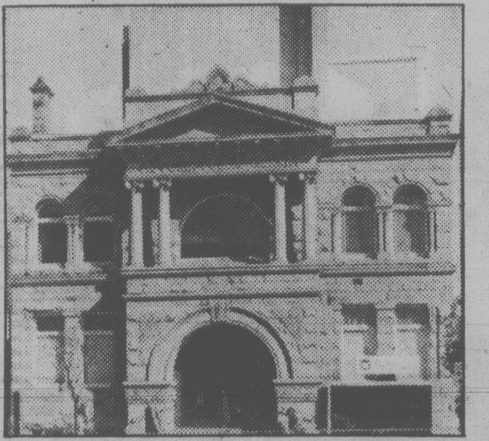
In case you're wondering



What's going to happen to the old Carnegie library?

The old sandstone building at Yates and Blanshard and the more modern library annex at the rear will be empty this spring when the central public library moves four blocks south.

But municipal politicians don't agree on the future of the two structures. They are in a state of limbo at the moment.

The old library was built in 1903 with a grant from the 19th-century steel baron, Andrew Carnegie, and last year was made a heritage landmark by its owner, the city of Victoria. It wants a commercial rent-paying tenant in there, such as a bookstore or art gallery.

However, the fate of the six-storey annex is more complicated. Victoria shares ownership with Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt and the four councils haven't got their act together yet.

The city wants the annex made into a centre for non-profit organizations and cultural groups, but one of the landlords is apparently balking.

Victoria promised to throw in the money it receives from renting the old building to maintain the annex for such a purpose, if the other municipalities go along.

It may be an academic question, however. No one has yet determined whether the annex and the original Carnegie library can be physically separated at a cost which is politically acceptable.

By PAT DUFOUR

Sgt. Ken Darling casts critical eye on one of his paintings hanging at dockyard of CFB Esquimalt

Sgt. Ken Darling, a soft-spoken commissioner who works in the Maritime Forces Pacific operations building in the dockyard of CFB Esquimalt, has a double role.

When he's not zeroing in on security, Darling is rapidly becoming the base's personal art historian and resident artist.

Darling began painting less than two years ago. Since then he's done about 60 paintings, working with acrylics, taking about 12 hours for each one.

Darling was born and raised in North Shields at the mouth of the Tyne and came to Canada in 1948. He had gone to sea as a cabin boy when he was 14 and served 10 years with the merchant marine before settling in Edmonton.

He worked at any job he could find and then ran his own sign-painting business for 15 years. "The only thing I was good at in school was art," he explains.

He stumbled into his new hobby by chance.

"I took a heart attack in 1972 and had open-heart surgery. For five years I was pretty useless. I didn't do anything. I made a woollen rug and started working on a book," he recalls.

He adds: "A couple of years ago I was writing some Christmas cards and came across the address of my old art teacher. It was 40 years since I left the old town.

"He is in his 70s, retired and does a lot of painting. He sent a couple of paintings of the old town."

Darling decided to return the compliment and painted a British Columbia scene for his old mentor, who wrote back that it was fresh, clear and powerful. "Just like a school report," Darling recalls.

The die was cast.

The first painting Darling did after that was of his old ship, the RMS (Royal Mail Ship) Queen Mary. He never lost his love of the sea and has painted scores of ships since then. His first canvas, showing a tall ship under full sail, helps turn his office quarters into an instant art gallery.

In the same building one of Darling's paintings hangs on the office wall of Lt.-Col. Charlie Poirier, senior staff officer operations. For Poirier it brings back the time he was flying Trackers from the aircraft carrier Bonaventure.

Another officer in the dockyard, with Darling's help, will relive his Second World War days with painted nostalgia. He has ordered eight paintings, all of ships manned in the war with the exception of one.

He and many others are grateful that Darling discovered that old address two years ago.

Boat victim's body found

The body of a woman drowned during a clam-digging trip Friday was found Sunday morning in a log boom in Sooke Basin.

Mrs. Barbara Planes, 50, of 2615 Otter Point, was lost along with her 52-year-old husband Louis when their boat overturned between Hutchinson Cove and Cooper's Cove about 12:30 a.m. The husband's body has not been recovered. Three other members of the family swam safely to shore when the 15-foot boat upset with its 800-pound load of clams.

Sooke RCMP said the body was held by logs and was spotted when a police boat and local residents conducted a search at 10 a.m. Sunday. The boom was about 750 feet offshore to the east of Sooke Forest Products mill.

Earlier, RCMP divers and a helicopter took part in the search, and the boat was recovered. It bore no sign of having hit an obstruction.

Police said volunteers are continuing the search for Planes' body.

Wildlife sanctuary urged

Council should purchase private land north of Queensbury that forms part of Kings Pond and manage it because the body of water supports all kinds of bird, small mammal and insect life, Laurenson says in a report.

Victoria Natural History Society asked council last September to turn the area in to a wildlife preserve and after investigating the request the planning department agrees, the report says.

Ottawa says no to Trident

The federal government has given a final no on further financing for Trident Aircraft of Sidney.

Finance Minister Hugh Curtis said today he was advised of that decision Sunday by the federal minister for small business and industry, Ron Huntington.

Curtis said when he met with Huntington Saturday there appeared to be a reasonable chance that the federal minister would change his mind about cutting off funding for Trident.

"Mr. Huntington then telephoned me Sunday to inform me that the federal government was unable or unwilling to participate with B.C. and the B.C. Development Corporation in ensuring that the firm remain in operation."

Trident president Jerome Vaverek said Huntington was favorable Saturday to the company's position, but "turned tail again Saturday night" and unilaterally decided against renewing the federal loan guarantees for the company.

Provincial Indiustry Minister Don Phillips called Huntington's decision "ridiculous" and said if the Triden plant had been in Ontario, the federal government would have found no problem in funding it.

"Precisely what B.C. can do now, on its own, is a matter which will require urgent and careful review," Curtis said.

"The loss of jobs is devastating for the individuals and families concerned, but the scuttling of a highly professional and skilled team of aircraft industry workers in the Capital Region also has an impact far beyond the dollars and cents of a payroll," Curtis added.

Maggie rumored staying afloat

Will the B.C. government have to eat crow and announce this month that the Princess Marguerite will be left on the Victoria-Seattle run again this year?

That's the rumor floating around Seattle according to Glen Lee, spokesman for a Seattle-based committee interested in keeping the 30-year-old steamship on the run.

He said in a telephone interview from Kennewick, Wash., rumor has it the Marquerite will be renovated to allow it to operate on the run for another two or three years. After that one of the larger B.C. Ferry Corp. vessels will be put on, Lee said.

The government announced in November that the Marguerite will not be used again on the popular summer run.

The government said in December it would cost $3 million a year to charter a replacement and between $12 million and $14 million to buy one.

Cedric Steele, president of the Chamber of Commerce, said today the government maintains in statements to his group that there will be a replacement for the Marguerite this summer.

Lee, however, said there is no way the government has time to charter a vessel and get it here and in shape for the opening of the season.

Trustees' pay 'downgrading' says Parrott

The president of the B.C. School Trustees' Association said today she favors giving trustees the power to set their own salaries.

"I think school trustees should have the same rights as municipal officers," said Ruby May Parrott, referring to salary-setting power accorded by the Municipal Act to mayors and aldermen.

At present B.C. trustees are limited by the Public Schools Act to a $2,000 annual stipend, a situation Education Minister Brian Smith says is too little to properly reimburse trustees for their duties.

Said Parrott: "I certainly agree with him."

What rankles trustees, Parrott said, is that the act appears to downgrade their responsibility, even though many school disticts have budgets far exceeding municipal budgets.

Prior to the $2,000 limit, trustees were paid on a sliding scale based on the size of the school district, which meant that trustees in smaller districts suffered, often working harder than urban trustees because their administrative staffs were smaller.

Smith said a general revision of the School Act would not take place until after the next sitting of the legislature.

He wants to hold a series of public meetings on the subject first, so that he and his senior administrators can get direct response from taxpayers.

Parrott said she hopes any philosophical changes would be developed through elected people rather than bureaucrats, although administrators could make some improvements to make the act more readable.

Smith said he intends to give community colleges and trades training much of his attention. Some enrolments have jumped 15 per cent this year.

Silver prices rise but coins bringing less

The price of silver is going up almost daily but coin dealers have lowered the price they're paying for silver coins.

Right now, dealers have a problem disposing of the coins, since most refineries can't take any more metal at present.

Most silver coins now are being bought for 13-to-17 times their face value, compared to up to 20 times during the height of the silver fever a few weeks ago.

"We're still buying, but we've got no place to sell it," said Michael Levy, who owns coin concessions at local Woodward's stores throughout B.C..

"The refiners are so backed up with silver that the major ones are not able to take any more until the first of May."

Levy said he is "buying cheap enough so that we can afford to be able to hold it for awhile," but was selling coins to interested buyers at up to 28 times their face value.

"We're still getting lineups every day, buying and selling," he said. "Business has been phenomenal."

Final bridge work

The Johnson Street bridge was closed all day Sunday for the last phase of a $1 million repair job. Crews replaced bearings on the western approach span and to install a guardrail. The bridge will be closed to all traffic again next Sunday from 8 a.m. to midnight.

Schreyer tops a distinguised list

Representing the Queen

BYNG

. . . turning point

MICHENER

. . . former speaker

VANIER

MASSEY

. . . first Canadian

One year ago, on January 22, 1979, Richard Edward Schreyer was installed as Canada's twenty-second governor-general since Confederation and, with his wife Lily and their young family, took up residence in Rideau Hall, Ottawa's Government House.

Highlights on his crowded calendar since then show he officially opened a federal Parliament in Ottawa; travelled from coast to coast; acted as host to royalty and to heads of state; bestowed honors on distinguished citizens and led the way at the first blood donor clinic ever held in Rideau Hall.

He has also seen two federal governments defeated, a country-wide election and is now awaiting results of another one, slated for mid-February.

Since Confederation in 1867 there have been a number of changes in the role of the governor-general to better reflect the evolving times and the needs of Canada as a nation.

Our first Governor-General Viscount Monck (1867-1868) played an important part in forming the coalition government which prepared the way for Confederation.

It was he who also declared that the British North America Act was to be our Constitution.

Governor-General the Earl of Dufferin (1872-1878) travelled extensively to promote Canadian unity.

At the same time, a few of his personal decisions raised government ire and resulted in some of the changes that have taken place.

Canada was in an economic depression at the start of his tenure and the Macdonald government was accused by having awarded the CPR contract in return for political contributions (the Pacific Scandal).

Shortly afterward British Columbia became angry with the slow pace of railway construction and threatened to secede from Confederation.

When this occurred Dufferin personally assumed authority and referred the matter to the colonial secretary in London, England.

That interference infuriated the Canadian government and, after a stormy session with the prime minister in Ottawa, Dufferin withdrew from personal involvement in the affairs of government.

On another occasion he exercised his prerogative of clemency and commuted the death sentence of Louis Riel's adjutant-general Lepine.

Again the government protested and London modified the judicial and executive functions of the governor-general.

Our ninth governor-general, Earl Grey (1904-1911) began a movement for the preservation of the Plains of Abraham; promoted the restoration of Louisbourg; the establishment of juvenile courts; called for civil service reform; lead a campaign against tuberculosis and urged the introduction of reindeer into Labrador.

It was due to his efforts that the National Gallery of Canada embarked on the formation of its collection.

His best legacy to sports is the Grey Cup, a symbol of championship in Canadian football.

In the half century immediately after Confederation, the British government had sole responsibility for nominating the governor-general.

However, in that time it had slowly become customary to consult our prime minister.

This was not done with the appointment of the Duke of Devonshire in 1916.

The government registered its concern and thereafter appointments were made only upon consultation with Canada.

The years 1921-1926, under Lord Byng of Vimy, marked yet another turning point in the evolution of the governor-general's office.

It centred around the defeat of Mackenzie King and his Liberal government and Byng's decision to call on Conservative Leader Arthur Meighen to form a government, instead of dissolving Parliament.

In turn Meighen was defeated, the Liberals won the ensuing election and quickly made their concern known regarding Byng's decision.

This resulted in a new definition of the governor-general as a representative of the Sovereign and not of the British government.

And while his particular interests were in the development of the arts, preservation of our environment, education and individual development, he also viewed his appointment as a special opportunity to make it clear the Crown belonged to Canadians as much as it belonged to Britons.

He spread that message from sea to sea.

First Canadian of French descent to hold office was Georges Philias Vanier (1959-1967).

He frequently spoke about bilingualism and Canada's two official language groups and he constantly stressed the need for unity and understanding between both as essential to the development of a powerful nation.

In the hundredth year of Confederation, Roland Michener, who had been Speaker of the House of Commons in the Diefenbaker government, was named governor-general.

It was in his term that the Order of Canada was introduced and, a few years later, the Order of Military Merit.

Thus, for the first time, Canada had a system of honors with the governor-general as chancellor and the Queen of Canada as sovereign.

The twenty-first governor-general was Jules Leger. Although hindered by poor health, with the able assistance of Madame Leger, he continued to carry out his duties with a strong devotion to Canada and its people.

Schreyer is the first from Western Canada and the first who is neither of British nor French descent. His roots are rural Manitoba and his ancestry, German and Austrian.

He is proficient in several languages — English, French, Polish, German and Ukranian. He is a strong federalist and a staunch Canadian.

And in one year he has proved to be a vigorous and hard-working governor-general.

Postscript: Basic facts for this column have been taken from a special report on Canada's governors-general, prepared by the minister of state, fitness and amateur sport (Iona Campagnolo) shortly before the Liberal government was defeated last year.

Astronomers have divided the stars into 88 groups or constellations. The purpose of these man-made divisions is to enable easy description of the location of the various stars. From southern Canada there are many constellations that can never be seen. These stars are known as southern circumpolar or northern circumpolar, depending upon whether they are suspended below the southern or northern horizon. To aid astronomers in locating stars and determining their relative positions, maps of the sky have been constructed.

If you would like more information on these maps and the constellations themselves, write to the National Museum of Science and Technology, 1867 St. Laurent Blvd., Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0M8.

Sliced onions can add zip to many meals and dishes. If you would like to enjoy the benefits of onions without the crying that peeling and chopping induces, then dehydrated onions could be the solution.

Before using dehydrated onions in any recipe, you should soak them in water for 30 minutes. When you are substituting for fresh onions, try one tablespoon per ¼ cup of fresh onions.

Great Recipes Using Sliced Onions is a free folder which is offered by Nabob Foods. The folder contains recipes for dips, shrimp, steak and casseroles which make use of onions, dehydrated style.

Iowa first presidential test

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — In living rooms, church basements and schoolhouses, Iowa Republicans and Democrats meet today to declare their presidential preferences in primary campaigns marked by sharp swings in public opinion polls.

The parties' precinct caucuses are the first official tests of the U.S. presidential campaign and a majority of the 10 Republicans and three Democrats seeking nomination campaigned hard in the state.

But not President Carter, who said the Iranian crisis required him to remain in Washington. Instead, he sent Vice-President Walter Mondale, members of the cabinet, his wife Rosalynn, their children and his mother.

And on Sunday, Carter demonstrated again the ability of a president to capture attention when he appeared on NBC's Meet the Press. He urged a boycott of the Summer Olympics in Moscow and defended the policies pursued during his three years in the White House.

Carter's chief rival for the Democratic nomination, Senator Edward Kennedy, was also on television Sunday.

On ABC's Issues and Answers, he said he would support an Olympics boycott, but called that proposal and the administration's partial embargo of grain sales to the Soviets "symbols" and added: "I don't think symbols are a substitute for an effective foreign policy."

Kennedy said Carter must receive at least 50 per cent of the caucus votes to claim victory — a difficult goal in a state that traditionally elects many uncommitted delegates.

Kennedy found himself in the role of an underdog, a dramatic reversal from the days before he became a candidate and before the takeover of the U.S. Embassy in Iran, when the senator led Carter 2 to 1 in most polls.

A poll conducted Jan. 6-9 by the Des Moines Register gave Carter 57 per cent popular support to Kennedy's 25 per cent. Just a month before, each man had drawn a 40-per-cent rating.

On the Republican side, former California governor Ronald Reagan still led in the latest Register poll but had slipped badly from his showing in an earlier one, taken before the televised debate earlier this month in which he declined to participate.

Several other Republican hopefuls predicted former UN ambassador George Bush, who campaigned hard and organized well in Iowa, will finish ahead of Reagan.

Senator Howard Baker of Tennessee told a rally in Des Moines that "I hope you'll turn out in massive numbers; that's the only way Howard Baker is going to do well."

Former governor John Connally of Texas wound up his Iowa campaign on Saturday after a 40-hour marathon stint that demonstrated his stamina and, Connally hoped, provided an obvious reminder that Reagan will be 69 years old next month.

The other active Republican candidate in Iowa was Representative Philip Crane of Illinois.

Amin guest of Saudis?

LONDON (Reuter) — The Sunday Telegraph says deposed Ugandan leader Idi Amin is living in Saudi Arabia under the protection of King Khaled.

Amin will be dissuaded by his Saudi hosts from joining supporters in southern Sudan, writes Norman Kirkham, the newspaper's diplomatic correspondent.

KODIAK, Alaska (AP) — A United States Coast Guard search plane found three Seattle men in a life raft Saturday afternoon, four days after they took to frigid Alaska waters when their crab boat sank under the weight of ice.

The life raft was sighted about 240 kilometres southeast of Cold Bay which is in the Aleutian Islands about 480 kilometres west of Kodiak.

A spokesman said the coast guard will continue to search for two other Seattle men aboard the crabber Gemini. The survivors were identified as Eric Mills, 20, Mark McKinnon, 20, and Wayne Scheuffely, 23.

The survivors said the Gemini sank and the two other men were unable to make it to the raft. However, the coast guard was regarding the sinking as unconfirmed and continuing the search for Steve Olden, about 27, and Roy O'Hara, about 24, both of Seattle.

Gov't announces new bond issue

OTTAWA (CP) — The finance department has released details of a new issue of $1.6 billion Government of Canada non-callable bonds.

The issue is dated Feb. 1 and will be delivered on that date. Proceeds of the offering will be used to redeem $944 million of Government of Canada bonds maturing Feb. 1 and for general purposes.

— 11¾ per cent bonds due Feb. 1, 2003, will be issued in a maximum of $600 million.

The Bank of Canada has agreed to buy at least $650 million of the new bonds. While the central bank's purchase will include a minimum of $215 million of the 2003 maturity, the rest of its acquisition is open regarding maturity dates.

The account is made up of a variety of Canadian government assets denominated in foreign currencies and gold.

Direct oil deal with Iraq

HALIFAX (CP) — Gulf Canada Ltd. has secured a contract with the Iraq National Oil Co. for supply of 25,000 barrels of oil a day for 11 months from Feb. 1. The oil is for Gulf's Point Tupper, N.S., refinery and the first shipment is due in March.

An announcement from Gulf's Toronto headquarters released here said it is believed to be the first time a Canadian oil company has dealt directly for supplies with a Middle East producer.

The deal was ironed out at talks with the Iraqi State Oil Marketing Organization last week in Baghdad, Gulf said.

Last month, the company announced a supply contract with the Venezuelan state oil company.

Gulf said it is "not out of the woods yet" in securing alternative supplies, but the Iraqi contract was an important step in that effort.
